Santa Claus filled Dame Society's stockings full to overflowing with the goodies of life. If that young lady did not need a hamsterizer every morning, it was a marvel.

How should they know he was a married man? Why it is that men are not marked "engaged" by a particularly noticeable contrivance. It all came about this way. The Illustrated Bee displayed portraits of some of the most prominent young business and professional men of the city in last Sunday's edition.

One of three little maids from school in the privacy of her own dainty boudoir gazed and gazed again at this particularly fascinating physiognomy. How she admired a broad, low forehead and hair parted in the middle.

Now brother Harry must get acquainted with the "adorable" and in the meantime the little maid took her scissors, clip, clip, a little fitting and the "adorable" was looking out at her from the daintiest of gold chateaus.

Of course the girls must not know. She would be careful not to open her watch. The three little maids with many kisses and embraces. Their tongues kept pace with the flying time.

"I must go, girls; I wonder what time—" opening her watch and quickly closing it again. "Oh, come," said the other two little maids with revived spirits.

"There's a man in the case," shouted one. "Let's see him," cried the other. And then a foot ball scrap ensued and all the watches somehow came into the hands of the big college brother.

There were pleadings not to open them. There were tearful entreaties and bribes of cigars, confections, pillows—anything—but to no avail. Each watch was held up to view and each displayed the same massive brook, the same adorable Greek nose, the same hair parted in the middle and the same care-free expression.

But the big college brother offered to introduce the "adorable" wife to the little maids. If they doubted his statement, And now the big college brother has only to mention the subject of married men and three little maids fall pleadingly at his feet.

The participants in a swell wedding last week have been whispering among themselves the question, Who is it? It happens to be Mrs. Anderson's baby.

You couldn't convince Mrs. Anderson that Cupid ever was as pretty as her little girl. Mrs. H. C. Anderson is well known in South Britain, Conn., where she lives.

She is very enthusiastic about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and says that more than thousands of other women who have been similarly benefited.

During the first month of the period of gestation there were plenty of headaches, but nothing to fear. I went to bed the 25th of June and the first of August, I tried different doctors.

but with little benefit. I began to take your Favorite Prescription November 1, and in a few days I was able to get up and walk. I was only in bed a few hours and was up and dressed in ten days. I never had the doctor visit me at all about the matter and two friends. This makes my second child, with the first one I did not take the Favorite Prescription, and the little one was sick all the time and lived just as long as the first one. I am as plump and healthy as any mother could wish. She is about three weeks old and is gaining to flesh every day.

that one of the party volunteered to stand at the door and inspect the cards as presented by the invited guests with a scrutiny that would keep out uninvited intruders. He stood there mechanically receiving the white pasteboards, just as he would have done in taking tickets at a theater, without looking at the people who presented them.

"Cards, please," asked the accommodating young man. "I have no card," came the answer. "No one is permitted to go in except those with cards."

"Well, I am a relative of the groom," at that moment the card-taker elevated his eye and recognized the mother of one of the necessary parties to the ceremony and apologies naturally followed.

One young Omaha society man, so the story goes, received a Christmas present which he is not exhibiting in public. This young man, who, by the way, moves in the highest circles, prides himself upon all-around good-fellowship and thinks he is licensed to do as Romans do when he is in Rome. It happens he was meandering up Sixteenth street before the holidays and happened upon an acquaintance whom he would not have invited to the collation of the dinner dance. He also happened to stroll by an itinerant photographer, who was just mean enough to snap-shot him as he passed along.

St. John's church was crowded with the happy throng on Thursday night when Mrs. Edna Cowin, daughter of General and Mrs. Cowin, and Mr. Jack Cudaby were united in the bonds of matrimony. The wedding ceremony, together with the beautiful marriage, was especially impressive.

The bride, a beautiful girl of the brunette type, wore a exquisite wedding gown of ivory tinted satin, elaborately garnished with point lace. The long train fell in unbroken folds from the waist. Over all fell the beautiful bridal veil. The bridal party was met at the church rail by the groom and his best man, Mr. Joseph Cudaby.

Mr. and Mrs. Cudaby left for a European trip of four months. On their return they will make their home in Kansas City, where Mr. Cudaby will be manager of one of the Cudaby packing houses. Miss Cowin was one of the most popular young women in society, her accomplishments and beauty easily winning marked distinction.

Monday evening General and Mrs. Cowin gave an elegant dinner party for Miss Cowin and her bridesmaids. The table was beautiful with its snowy napery, profusion of American Beauties and sparkling cut glass.
