MORE TROUBLE ON THE LEAGUE'S MIND

Patriotic Brigade in Sore Straits What to Do Until Absent Guide and Patron Returns and Takes Reins.

As one of The Bee reporters went for the mail yesterday he found lying on the floor of the postoffice several closely wrapped sheets which had evidently been dropped out of the envelope on which were inscribed this quaint epistle:

"OMAHA, Jan. 17.—My Dear Web: How much longer are you going to stay down in Falls City? It seems everything has been going wrong since you left here and must communicate with you some way. Do not dare use telephone any more because last night an infernal Bee reporter was listening somewhere and got nearly every word of our conversation into his paper.

"I want to tell you I ought to get back here as soon as you can because some of our fellows are so scared by the exposure of our school board friends that they don't know which way to turn. They think everybody is a detective and are afraid that the next one squealed on will be himself.

"Saw Lunt today and he assured me they couldn't get you mixed in any more but they have already because you've been too careful in covering your tracks and that you have dealt through him entirely. He says that is what we had him put in as school board attorney for and that he will protect you no matter what happens.

"I wish they were all like Hess. He don't give a cent for any of them. Stands right up and boasts he was not in the board for his health and wants to know what they are going to do about it.

"And what about this nasty stuff coming up from Falls City about your will? Be careful there! If newspaper reports are correct that seems to be turning out about as badly for us as the other. About you would let me know if there is anything I can do. I was talking the other day with a Richardson county man who seemed to have it straight from one of the Reeveses.

"The case," said Heavis, according to my informant, "was such a big one that we had to get in some outside lawyers. It all turned on a will involving about $50,000. There had been a rumor of another will made by old Miles which was the deal by which we would have the needed testimony about the later will, but seems to have fallen down woefully. After hiring his detectives and setting up his dummy witnesses the detective who was on the other side, so here we are with all our plans, correspondence and everything in the hands of the opposing attorneys.

"I have not written a thing," Reavis is reported to have added, "that would compromise me. What says he has not written anything either this is very bad, but Rigoley has simply put his foot in it and it is going to raise an awful racket when the whole thing comes out.

"That's just the way the story came to me. Hope it's no worse than that as that is bad enough, and it won't help us or our league to any appreciable extent.

"Wonder if that $75,000 item is correct. If so you ought to be more liberal in your contribution to the league's treasury. Don't suppose, however, you can get the money for some time, if the case is taken up. It's too bad, because with that amount of cash at our disposal we could pull you through the senatorial campaign without much difficulty. It didn't cost Clark any more than that out in Montana.

"But this local matter is getting mixed up worse and worse. You must let us know what you want done because the league is like a chicken with its head off when you are not here.

"Keep this letter confidential. You may be sure I won't whisper a word of it. Yours in haste, CADET."

PETER MANGEL PERSISTENT

Small Matter Like Being Evicted from His Home Doesn't Seem to Worry Him.

Peter Mangel is not easily discouraged. For several months he has lived with his family in a tenement house at 4216 North Twenty-sixth street. It is said that Peter did not pay his rent. A few days ago the agent in charge of the property caused the Mangel family to be evicted. Their furniture was tossed out into the street and the doors of the house were locked and bolted. The constable who executed the eviction order went away believing that he had performed his work thoroughly. The rental agent sent a man out to tuck up a "For rent" sign.

Peter hired his time until the coast was clear of interested parties, and then he broke open a door and carted his household furniture back into the place and established Mrs. Mangel and the little Mangels in possession. At least this is the allegation made in court papers. Peter, however, did not care for the eviction order. He tipped a station employe handsomely to clear the trunk of its decorations and hastily joined a handsome, blushing young woman who had driven to the station with him in a cab.

Quality Merits Reward. The following is a copy of a New Year's telegram directed to all the wholesale customers of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing association of St. Louis, Mo.:

"Predictions made in our last year's message are far surpassed by our trade reports for 1899. We have reached the highest point of production in our history. Quality recognizes no competitor and instead of yielding has made quantity its commercial ally. We lead in both. Our motto, 'Nothing is too good for the American people,' was fully and promptly and generously responded everywhere and in return we send with a hearty good-will our wishes for a happy New Year to you and all our friends.

"ADOLPHUS BUSCH, President. The remarkable business showing of this country fully warranted the above. Inasmuch as the fiscal reports of the Internal Revenue department show a decrease of 912,000 barrels in the consumption of beer against the preceding fiscal year, which may, in a measure, be attributed to the war tax of 31 per cent imposed on July 1, 1898. The output of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing association, being the largest in the world, should naturally have shown the greatest loss; yet their sales for the fiscal year just ended exceed those of the preceding year in the history of the association.

Their sales of bottled beer alone have increased 30 1/2 per cent, which is conclusive evidence that a good article finds a good market among an appreciative public and that 'quality merits reward.'

BUSBY BLOWS OUT THE GAS

Farmer from Carter County Narrowly Escapes Death by Asphyxiation at the Oxford Hotel.

John Busby, a farmer of Carter county who arrived in the city Monday with a load of hogs, blew out the gas in the Oxford hotel, Eleventh and Farnam streets, about 11:30 Wednesday night, and but for the prompt attendance of Dr. H. C. Bierbaum, yesterday would have lost his life by asphyxiation.

Busby had left a call for 5:30, intending to return home by an early train yesterday, and at that hour the night clerk went upstairs to arouse him.

As he reached the landing on the third floor he found the hall full of gas. There was no response to his knock on the door of room 25, occupied by Busby, so he forced the lock and found the occupant unconscious. The air in the room was stifling. He lifted the blinds, opened the door and called Dr. Bierbaum by phone.

"This looked like a serious case at first," said the doctor, "and his recovery was by no means certain. The fact that the transfusion was open about two inches alone saved him, as otherwise he would have died before being brought to the hospital."

The room in which the accident occurred is very small, not more than 8x10 feet, and is ventilated by a single window about a foot square. The night clerk, who showed Busby to bed, says he warned him about the gas.

"Did you blow out the gas?" Busby was asked. "Yes," he answered. "Why did you do it?" "I'm not used to sleeping in a room with a light in it."

"But why didn't you turn it out?" "Oh, I don't know anything about gas. Never slept in a room before that was lighted by gas."

"How did you blow it out?" "Why, I just stood up in a chair and went to blowing. It was pretty hard to blow out, but I kept at it."

Busby says he lives on a farm about thirty miles from Broken Bow. The hogs he brought in belonged to a stockman in his vicinity. If well enough he will return today.

FRIENDS DECORATED TRUNK

Bridegroom the Victim of an Old but Newly Executed Joke—His Trunk Attracts Much Attention.

The decoration of trunks and grips of newly wedded people with all sorts of grotesque figures and cards bearing alleged witty sayings is of such common occurrence that the train and depot baggage men seldom pay attention to them. A trunk arrived at the union station yesterday, however, which was so originally decorated that more than passing notice was given to it. It belonged to a couple who had come from Chicago on their wedding tour, and the small size of the trunk led some knowing friend to attach a placard bearing the information that "this belongs to the groom. The bride's trunk, containing her trousseau, follows in a special train." The trunk was literally covered with inscriptions. One big card read, "I left my happy home for you—because I loved you." Another admonished the groom, "Be good to your wife and don't forget to register when you get to the hotel." The trunk was decorated with bunches of violets, bride's roses, old shoes and several articles suggestive of babies' wearing apparel.

During the morning a young man, dressed in the height of fashion, called at the baggage room and presented a check corresponding to the one upon the trunk. As soon as this became known he was the cynosure of all eyes and was visibly bored by the gazing of the crowd. Quality recognizes no competitor and instead of yielding has made quantity its commercial ally. We lead in both. Our motto, 'Nothing is too good for the American people,' was fully and promptly and generously responded everywhere and in return we send with a hearty good-will our wishes for a happy New Year to you and all our friends.

Scott has just completed a post-graduate course in McCormick seminary, Chicago. He is originally from the east and made a successful record as a minister in Massachusetts before he came west.

Since the resignation of Rev. Wilson three months ago Castellar street church has been without a regular pastor, although the pulpit has been supplied from time to time. Rev. Scott delivered one sermon and made such a favorable impression that the congregation invited him to make a permanent engagement. He has not yet been formally installed, but has accepted the call and the installation will take place in the near future. Rev. Scott is unmarried.

DOG POISONING HIS HOBBY

Mysterious Old Man Squirts a Vicious Fluid Out of a Bicycle Oil Can.

An old man, somewhat under medium height, wearing a gray overcoat and black hat, was seen in the alley in the rear of 1911 Douglas street about noon yesterday playing with several dogs belonging to the neighbors. A small boy standing near saw him take a thing from his pocket that looked like a bicycle oil can and squirt something from it into the mouth of the dogs. In less than five minutes four of these dogs were dead.

A family by the name of H. S. Maniering, living at 1911 Douglas, lost two valuable animals at the hands of this mysterious person. They notified the police at once and offered $10 reward for his apprehension. It is not known who owns the other two dogs. One of them is a handsome young pug, evidently a pet in some household. The police are unable to account for this wholesale poisoning and the only tenable theory seems to be that the man is crazy.

HEIRS OF THE BALL ESTATE

Telegram from Chicago Leads Several Omaha People to Hope for Realization of Rights.

A telegram in yesterday morning's Bee announcing that Patrick O'Donnell of Chicago had been notified that he would in a few days receive $2,500,000 as his share of the Ball estate, which has been in the probate court at Philadelphia for the last eight years, attracted with pleasure by several citizens of Omaha, as indicating that the Ball estate will be finally settled, although they are somewhat mystified as to how the estate should be valued at only $6,000,000.

Basel W. Ball, one of the Omaha heirs, said that it originated fifty or more years ago upon the death of the Ball who amassed the fortune. He had no descendants, but his brothers and sisters were more fortunate and there are now about 1,000 persons entitled to a share in the estate. Much of the property consists of real estate in Maryland, Pennsylvania, New
