HER DIVORCE NOT ON RECORD.

After Seven Years Mrs. Crounse Discovers She Still Wears the Yoke, Mrs. Lena Crounse has begun proceedings in the district court to have her divorce decree placed on record. For seven years Mrs.

Crounse has fancied herself free from the matrimontal yoke and, according to her statement, she only discovered her mistake a few days ago. She sets forth that in 1893 she went into the district court and gave evidence in divorce preceedings against Edwin Crounse. At the conclusion of the hearing the judge said he would grant the divorce so Mrs. Crounse alleges, and her lawyers in formed her that there was nothing further for her to do. It now appears that through some oversight the decree was never retation, and he had no difficulty in giving corded and that leaves Mrs. Crounse legally bound in matrimony. She has never remarered small sums taken from time to time ried.
