GARBAGE PLACED IN EVIDENCE

Lunch Wagon Proprietor, Charged with Perverting Use of Trash Can, Establishes His Innocence.

G. A. Johnson, colored, proprietor of a lunch wagon stationed at Sixteenth and Webster streets, was in police court yesterday on a charge of dumping garbage in a trash can. He pleaded not guilty and in proof of his innocence offered in evidence three empty sardine boxes and a pint of radish peelings, which he insisted upon having marked respectively exhibits "A" and "B."

"I found them in the can, your honor," he said.

"But you mustn't put such things in the trash cans," said the judge. "Those cans are for waste paper only. Can't you read the placard on them?"

"Yes, sir, and I didn't put them in." That ain't my garbage. I can prove by a hundred witnesses that I don't deal in sardines and radishes. I sell only—

MAYOR TOUCHED BY A SONG

Successful Hit on His Honor's Sentiments and Finances by Sweet-Voiced Child.

As the woman entered the mayor's office a tattered corner of her dress caught on the railing behind which the visitors' chairs are ranged. The little girl with her released the imprisoned garment and together they took seats among the variegated collection of humanity.

When their turn came the woman took the little girl by the hand and passed into his honor's private office. The girl was pretty and was cleanly, though neatly dressed.

Mayor Moore asked what he could do for her, well knowing by a glance the answer to the query before it was uttered.

"First, I'd like you to hear Bessie sing," said the woman. "Now, Bessie, sing for the mayor."

The small bit of femininity advanced, made a curtsy and started in a faint, sweet treble the song entitled "Me and My Dolly." As she proceeded her voice grew stronger.

The mayor barely had time to say "That was very nice, little one," when Bessie, at a suggestion from her mother, sang another song, this time about two little children playing in the sand.

"Very fine, indeed," said the mayor, when the mother interjected, "Now about the poor widows of the war."

The room was again filled with the melody of the child's voice. There were several widows in the room, the widows of the war and the needs of the little ones at home.

The woman's story was then related. It had been told many times and will always be told. The mayor is used to such narratives. He had never listened to one, however, in just the same setting. The wretched face of the child, her flowing hair, the accompaniment of her pathetic, sweet song, the happy smile lighted up the features of the mother as he put something into her hand. The child made a final curtsy and the two passed out of the office.

GRAND LARCENY OF A FARM

Seven Wisconsin Brothers Cultivate a Tract Without the Owner's Permission and Get Into Trouble.

Theodore, Jack, Henry, William, George, Wesley and Emil Wiseman, who were recently charged in Justice Crawford's court with the grand larceny of a five-acre garden out near Dundee, are absolved of the accusation. The matter was settled out of court, the plaintiff, D. L. Johnson, agreeing to dismiss the complaint if the seven Wiseman brothers would withdraw from his estate.

The brothers had already put in two acres of onions and when arrested had begun operations on a potato patch. They said they thought the land belonged to an eastern capitalist and that they could "steak in" and harvest a crop without his knowing it.

JOLLY TAR AND HIS WASH

Why David Stanfield Took a Set of Light Harness to the Laundry.

A man with a rolling gait, his tattooed arms encircling a large, unwieldy package, was stopped on the street by Officer Woodruff and questioned as to his destination, and as to the contents of the bundle.

"I am going to the laundry," said he, "and in this package are three suits of underwear, two shirts, collars, cuffs and four pairs of socks."

"Very well," said the officer. "I know the laundryman, and as it's on my beat, I'll just walk down there with you if you have no objection."

There was none, and as the sailor tossed the parcel upon the counter he remarked that he wanted it sure by Saturday night.

The clerk was about to take his name and address, when something peculiar about the bundle arrested his practiced eye. She ran her fingers over it like a phrenologist feeling over a bump.

"A suit of underwear. I knotted them up."

"And this?"

"A pair of socks."

But the clerk was not satisfied. With a deft movement she unwrapped the package and found in lieu of solid balbriggan a set of light harness.

David Stanfield, the sailor, with pruning shears and a lawnmower, had been reeling the toll-gallants and scrubbing the scuppers of A. A. Parker's front yard, according to his story told in police court yesterday.

But the balmy spring air awoke in him a desire to resume his life on the ocean wave, so he stole the doctor's harness and was on his way to the parsonage with it, when he met the officer. He was given thirty days in jail.

BOSTON STORE WRECK PURCHASE.

Immense Purchase of Nearly Three Car Loads of Carpets and Rugs.

SALE BEGINS MONDAY.

From an eastern transportation company our New York representative purchased in bulk three carloads of carpets and rugs. They were consigned to a prominent Chicago carpet store. These goods were damaged in transit and sold in bulk for spot cash, and we secured one of the greatest bargains we have ever had the pleasure of offering to our patrons.

A part of these goods have now arrived and in almost soured and perfect condition. That which we have thus far received is nearly a solid car of all kinds of rugs from the small door size to the large room size.

We have yet to receive two cars of carpets, and as they arrive we will announce what they consist of. We will place the entire lot on sale NEXT MONDAY MORNING and offer without doubt the GRAND-EST SPECIAL SALE OF CARPETS that has ever taken place in the west.

Watch the daily papers of announcements. BOSTON STORE, OMAHA. N. W. Cor. 16th and Douglas Sts.
