United States Court of Appeals Directs Receiver McDonald to Allow the State Its Private Dividend.

LINCOLN, April 20.- (Special.)-A copy of the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals in the case of the State of Nebraska against J. W. McDonald, receiver, mainder of the senson; of the defunct Capital National bank, was filed with the authorities at the state house today. This suit was instituted to recover the state's deposit in the broken bank. amounting to $285,351.85, and the decision of the court of appeals holds that the state has a legal claim to the money and should May be paid pro rata with other depositors. The May Dates. receiver is scored rather severely for refusing to allow the claim, which the court holds | vil to be confessedly just and meritorious,

The opinion in the case is quite extensive and contains much matter of interest to May Nebraska lawyers. The supreme court is eacomplimented very highly in the following L adopted the reform system of pleading, and bin, a "The state of Nebraska early there is probably no state in the union whose courts have given to that system a whose courts have given to the present the second of the court of the second of the se and, we may say, expressed purpose and intent. The code of that state abolishes all, poly common law forms of actions." The opinion is by Judge Caliwell, Judges Sanborn and Thayer concurring.

High school attendance law unconstitutional:

In High School District, No. 137, of Havelock, Neb., against County of Lameaster, in an opinion prepared by Judge Norval, the high school law passed in 1829 was teday declared unconstitutional. Briefly stated, the grounds of this decision are as follows:

The law provided for the attendance of persons of school age at any high school in the county where such person resided outside the limits of any high school district. The fultion for such attendance at the rate of 35 cents per week was required to be paid the high school district by the county. It was held in the opinion referred to that if 35 cents per week was in excess of fair compensation it was on the one hand, favorable to the high school district, and on the other rand in the same degree was unfair to the remainder of the county. If conditions were reversed and 35 cents was insufficient, the county profited and the high school district was discriminated against. If was assumed that the rate indicated must necessarily be unequal and an unfair discrimination, one way or the other, that therefore the law was unconstitutional because in contravention of sections 1, 4 and 8 of article ix of the constitution of Nebraska. These sections, for the purposes of the case, were epitomized in the following paragraph of the syllabus prepared by Judge Norval: "The constitution of this state requires not only that the valuation of property for taxation, but the rate as well, must be uniform."

It would seem in the face of the feregoing that it will be practically impossible to frame a law that will be constitutional unless the constitution is self be amended. We hope that no young man or young weman will feel that a high school educawe hope that no young man or young we have the same as the state convention apportion or even a more advanced education, is cut off because of this decision. The self-relient young man or young woman who has the nerseverance and determination to get an education will be able to overcome obstacles and make ways, and indeed it is a question whether it is not informate for a young min to have his tuition paid if he is able to any his way by his own efforts. We shall hope that there will continue to be the same interest and enthusiasm in the high schools of our state that has so fully characterized them during the present year.

The apportionment of this convention will be the same as the state convention apportionment, giving Cuming ten, Dakota seven and Thurston six delegates.

But the old plays that had their genesis in the teeming brains of the men who had swept the whole gamut of human passion must continue to strike a responsive theater-goers to see Richard Manefield last chord in every heart that beats in consonance with the great pulsing of humanity

It is probably unnecessary to state that the production of "The Merchant of Venice," as given last night by Mr. Irving and Miss Ellen Terry was the most sumptuous ever Carter's brilliant triumph in "Zaza" is seen in this city. There was a warmth of threatened with an untimely end. Comcoloring in every scene that was Oriental plaints having been made to the lord chamin its depth and brightness, and the roistering masquers, bent only on pleasure, made a background, against which the somber character of the Jew stood out in bold relief. With the possible exception of Hamlet, Shylock is the most protean of any of Shakespeare's creations, and the interpretation which the different artists have given him have varied from one another according to the conception which each has formel of ford. In this attack on "Zaza" there is his true character. In Mr. Irving's hands he is crafty, cunning, avaricious, revengeful, yet not devoid of tender sentiment. Shylock is, all in all, a very human personage, a man who loves the memory of his wife. his only daughter, his religion and his race. He has been spurned and insulted by the Christians with whom he buys and sells, thwarted in his bargains by their unwelcome interference, hindered in his gains, eyen spit upon, and his blood is hot with a hate that carries him beyond the bounds of prudence, and is only stayed when, just in what seems to be the hour of his triumph. he is broken upon the wheel of his passion. Yet there was unspeakable love portrayed when he bade his daughter farewell for the last time, before setting forth to the supper to which he had been bidden, and even more strongly when, in the scene with Tubal, the mention of the turquoise ring brought back a flood of precious memories. It is in this scene, too, that the full fury of his hate for Antonio begins to show itself-a hate that impels him forward to his own undoing in the court to which he has pressed his suit. Throughout the course of the drama Mr. Irving gave a consistent and commendable interpretation of the role, his mobile face reflecting every passion that surged through the tumultuous breast of the Jew. It was the most artistic piece of work that has ever been seen on the stage of the Boyd's and, in all probability, will never be duplicated until such time as the master visits the city

Equally commendable was the Portia of Miss Ellen Terry. Though lacking in some of the physical endowments which most people have come to associate with the character, her defects in this direction were more than compensated for in the many deft touches she bestowed on her work. The covering of the casket which held her picture with roses and her turning of the pages of Antonio's letter with Bassanio are but two of the many little embellishments which her more serious work received and which stamped her as an artist of the highest rank. In the trial scene she was at her best, and the excellence of her acting was accentuated by an unconventionality that would have been disastrous to one
