

DENTISTS CLOSE SESSION

Election of Officers and Decision to Meet in Omaha Again Next Year.

EXCLUDE A BROTHER WHO ADVERTISES

Omaha Doctor Applies for Membership, but is Turned Down Because He Uses Printers' Ink to Reach People.

The Nebraska State Dental association meeting which has been in session in this city since Tuesday closed Thursday night.

Officers were elected as follows: Dr. W. H. Sherraden, president, Omaha; Dr. Les Mills, vice president, Omaha; Dr. W. H. Clark, recording secretary, Howard; Dr. J. S. Shaw, corresponding secretary, Lincoln; Dr. H. F. King, treasurer, Fremont.

The feature of the evening session was a heated discussion on advertising. It came about through the action of the society in refusing to act on the membership application of an Omaha dentist who was recently graduated from one of the colleges.

Even those who vigorously opposed his admission to membership admitted his skill as a dentist and his high character as a gentleman and citizen—and he advises, it was the sense of the meeting that a dentist who resorts to printers' ink as a medium of promoting his profession to the public is unworthy of membership.

The early part of the evening was taken up with an illustrated lecture by Dr. H. Angell of St. Louis and it was nearly 9 o'clock before the convention reached the routine business before it.

The morning session was devoted to clinics and demonstrations of new and scientific methods and operations in operative dentistry or the preservation of the teeth.

Dr. C. N. Johnson of Chicago, in a demonstration of the insertion of gold-filling exemplifying his views on the scientific preparation of large and complicated cavities, following out the suggestions made in a discussion of that subject the previous evening.

Dr. Johnson holds the chair of operative dentistry in the Chicago College of Dental Surgery. He is a forcible talker and demonstrator, which qualifications, together with his genial manners, has placed him at the head of his profession.

Clinic hall, at the college, was filled with dental chairs which were occupied during the demonstration chiefly by dentists, who were content to sacrifice themselves to the advancement of science and subject themselves to the process of taking a little of their own medicine.

Dr. Wedelstaedt of St. Paul, Minn., gave a demonstration of the proper preparation of a cavity for the insertion of a cement filling; Dr. J. C. Whinnery of Omaha of the insertion of a large gold filling, demonstrating the use of hand pressure and mallet; Dr. H. J. Aleshugh of Omaha and Dr. H. J. Cole of Norfolk, on the preparation of cavity and filling with moss fibre gold with hand pressure; Dr. A. W. Nason of Omaha, on the insertion of gold filling, using Flowers' new process; Dr. H. W. Shriver of Omaha, on filling teeth with moss fibre gold, using automatic mallet; Dr. J. H. Wallace of Omaha, on filling of approximal cavity, using Perry separator; Dr. L. P. Davis of Lincoln, on the use of platinum gold with Powers' mallet; Dr. J. M. Lucas of Lincoln, on the use of rubber dam-clamp; Dr. D. P. Sims of Lincoln, on insertion of gold filling, using mechanical mallet and a water motor of his own invention.

Mrs. Mabel Crames attempted to commit suicide Thursday evening by taking a dose of eye medicine containing a large amount of atropine. She had been quarreling about some trivial matter with her mother, Mrs. Mary Howard, with whom she resides in the 1st E. flat at No. 1313 Thirtieth street.

The police station was notified of the affair at half past 8 o'clock.

When Police Sergeant Ames and the officers arrived they found the woman in a half-delirious condition. She was seated in a chair with her 3-year-old daughter on her lap. The woman's fingers were around the child's throat as though she were choking it and when her hands were unloosed by a policeman the red marks on the tender skin were plainly visible.

She fiercely resisted every effort to give medical treatment and it was only after hard work that her system was partially relieved of the poison. At a late hour she was reported as having a good chance for recovery.

Mrs. Crames had another excuse for her action aside from the quarrel; her husband left about a year ago and has not been heard of for a long time. This made her

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive in its nature. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs of the kidney, then break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles most always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickly by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sized bottles. You may have a sample of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both in English and German, sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive in its nature. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs of the kidney, then break down and waste away cell by cell. Bladder troubles most always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickly by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sized bottles. You may have a sample of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both in English and German, sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

SOUTH OMAHA NEWS.

MUSIC.

Some time ago when the Liza Lehmann song cycle, adapted to the words of Omar Khayyam's "Rubaiyat" was sung in this city, it was suggested by the musical critic of The Bee that Omaha singers could have given the work "In a Persian Garden" more acceptably.

The music of the "Rubaiyat" is not strongly convincing; in fact, it gives no certain conception of the jovial astronomer who so pleasingly embodied and delightfully expressed the truths we are today realizing and who gave utterance to fundamental tenets which today the world is accepting in a large measure as its creed.

The ladies and gentlemen who presented the song cycle did so on the whole, very commendable work. It was unfortunate that the parts were not better assigned, for in some places it was difficult to determine who was the contralto and who the soprano, while the tenor and basso were frequently interchangeable. The confusion arose from the fact that neither the soprano nor the tenor of the evening had a decided timbre, the former being a mezzo, with a tendency to good low tones and the latter a baritone with an extended compass and a forced production.

Myron Smith was surely the distinguishing feature of the evening and her magnificent contralto voice was heard to good advantage in the role assigned to her. She is a musician of much emotion and she uses her voice with skill.

Mr. Martin, despite a tendency to keep his mouth closed when he wishes to send his voice out, was convincing, especially in his recitative. His voice is a pure basso cantante and he uses it with judgment beyond his years.

Mrs. Leonard entered into her work with vim and earnestness and in her solo work she produced some warm, delicious tones whose beauty was fully appreciated.

Will McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

SOUTH OMAHA NEWS.

MUSIC.

Some time ago when the Liza Lehmann song cycle, adapted to the words of Omar Khayyam's "Rubaiyat" was sung in this city, it was suggested by the musical critic of The Bee that Omaha singers could have given the work "In a Persian Garden" more acceptably.

The music of the "Rubaiyat" is not strongly convincing; in fact, it gives no certain conception of the jovial astronomer who so pleasingly embodied and delightfully expressed the truths we are today realizing and who gave utterance to fundamental tenets which today the world is accepting in a large measure as its creed.

The ladies and gentlemen who presented the song cycle did so on the whole, very commendable work. It was unfortunate that the parts were not better assigned, for in some places it was difficult to determine who was the contralto and who the soprano, while the tenor and basso were frequently interchangeable. The confusion arose from the fact that neither the soprano nor the tenor of the evening had a decided timbre, the former being a mezzo, with a tendency to good low tones and the latter a baritone with an extended compass and a forced production.

Myron Smith was surely the distinguishing feature of the evening and her magnificent contralto voice was heard to good advantage in the role assigned to her. She is a musician of much emotion and she uses her voice with skill.

Mr. Martin, despite a tendency to keep his mouth closed when he wishes to send his voice out, was convincing, especially in his recitative. His voice is a pure basso cantante and he uses it with judgment beyond his years.

Mrs. Leonard entered into her work with vim and earnestness and in her solo work she produced some warm, delicious tones whose beauty was fully appreciated.

Will McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

SOUTH OMAHA NEWS.

MUSIC.

Some time ago when the Liza Lehmann song cycle, adapted to the words of Omar Khayyam's "Rubaiyat" was sung in this city, it was suggested by the musical critic of The Bee that Omaha singers could have given the work "In a Persian Garden" more acceptably.

The music of the "Rubaiyat" is not strongly convincing; in fact, it gives no certain conception of the jovial astronomer who so pleasingly embodied and delightfully expressed the truths we are today realizing and who gave utterance to fundamental tenets which today the world is accepting in a large measure as its creed.

The ladies and gentlemen who presented the song cycle did so on the whole, very commendable work. It was unfortunate that the parts were not better assigned, for in some places it was difficult to determine who was the contralto and who the soprano, while the tenor and basso were frequently interchangeable. The confusion arose from the fact that neither the soprano nor the tenor of the evening had a decided timbre, the former being a mezzo, with a tendency to good low tones and the latter a baritone with an extended compass and a forced production.

Myron Smith was surely the distinguishing feature of the evening and her magnificent contralto voice was heard to good advantage in the role assigned to her. She is a musician of much emotion and she uses her voice with skill.

Mr. Martin, despite a tendency to keep his mouth closed when he wishes to send his voice out, was convincing, especially in his recitative. His voice is a pure basso cantante and he uses it with judgment beyond his years.

Mrs. Leonard entered into her work with vim and earnestness and in her solo work she produced some warm, delicious tones whose beauty was fully appreciated.

Will McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

SOUTH OMAHA NEWS.

MUSIC.

Some time ago when the Liza Lehmann song cycle, adapted to the words of Omar Khayyam's "Rubaiyat" was sung in this city, it was suggested by the musical critic of The Bee that Omaha singers could have given the work "In a Persian Garden" more acceptably.

The music of the "Rubaiyat" is not strongly convincing; in fact, it gives no certain conception of the jovial astronomer who so pleasingly embodied and delightfully expressed the truths we are today realizing and who gave utterance to fundamental tenets which today the world is accepting in a large measure as its creed.

The ladies and gentlemen who presented the song cycle did so on the whole, very commendable work. It was unfortunate that the parts were not better assigned, for in some places it was difficult to determine who was the contralto and who the soprano, while the tenor and basso were frequently interchangeable. The confusion arose from the fact that neither the soprano nor the tenor of the evening had a decided timbre, the former being a mezzo, with a tendency to good low tones and the latter a baritone with an extended compass and a forced production.

Myron Smith was surely the distinguishing feature of the evening and her magnificent contralto voice was heard to good advantage in the role assigned to her. She is a musician of much emotion and she uses her voice with skill.

Mr. Martin, despite a tendency to keep his mouth closed when he wishes to send his voice out, was convincing, especially in his recitative. His voice is a pure basso cantante and he uses it with judgment beyond his years.

Mrs. Leonard entered into her work with vim and earnestness and in her solo work she produced some warm, delicious tones whose beauty was fully appreciated.

Will McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

SOUTH OMAHA NEWS.

MUSIC.

Some time ago when the Liza Lehmann song cycle, adapted to the words of Omar Khayyam's "Rubaiyat" was sung in this city, it was suggested by the musical critic of The Bee that Omaha singers could have given the work "In a Persian Garden" more acceptably.

The music of the "Rubaiyat" is not strongly convincing; in fact, it gives no certain conception of the jovial astronomer who so pleasingly embodied and delightfully expressed the truths we are today realizing and who gave utterance to fundamental tenets which today the world is accepting in a large measure as its creed.

The ladies and gentlemen who presented the song cycle did so on the whole, very commendable work. It was unfortunate that the parts were not better assigned, for in some places it was difficult to determine who was the contralto and who the soprano, while the tenor and basso were frequently interchangeable. The confusion arose from the fact that neither the soprano nor the tenor of the evening had a decided timbre, the former being a mezzo, with a tendency to good low tones and the latter a baritone with an extended compass and a forced production.

Myron Smith was surely the distinguishing feature of the evening and her magnificent contralto voice was heard to good advantage in the role assigned to her. She is a musician of much emotion and she uses her voice with skill.

Mr. Martin, despite a tendency to keep his mouth closed when he wishes to send his voice out, was convincing, especially in his recitative. His voice is a pure basso cantante and he uses it with judgment beyond his years.

Mrs. Leonard entered into her work with vim and earnestness and in her solo work she produced some warm, delicious tones whose beauty was fully appreciated.

Will McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is good. He sang naturally, in a tone of voice of the style which is prevalent throughout the score of the "Rubaiyat".

Mr. McCune was much better in his solo than in the concerted work, but yet there was in his singing a quality which on the whole is