luched and went crashing through the window. The bandit made no further effort to extract any bounty from the Kansas City man and hurriedly retreated to the rear of the car, covering Conductor Finnelly with his revolver and compelling him to proceed him.

He showed familiarity with the operation of a train, for he commanded the conductor to turn off the air. The order was complied with, and as the train gradually slackened its speed the robber disappeared to the rear platform. Turning suddenly he discovered that the conductor had followed him. Leveling his revolver at Mr. Finnelly's head he demanded that he return inside the car and lock the door.

At a point a half mile south of Stella the robber alighted from the train and disappeared in the darkness. The holdup had consumed less than fifteen minutes and only six miles of distance were traversed from the time of his entry into the car until he made his escape.

Search Is Instituted.

The special service department of the Missouri Pacific began operations this morning with a view of early apprehending the robber. Special Agent John DeLong has charge of the case and from the information collected believes that the robbery was the work of an amateur, prompted by reason of a similar successful holdup which occurred on a Missouri Pacific sleeper a few months ago.

Simon C. Ayer, the Omaha man who figured in the affair, is a right-of-way agent in the employ of the Union Pacific and resides at 292 North Eighteenth street.

A telephone message from Stella to the Bee at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon says that Mr. DeLong was in that city endeavoring to find some clue that will disclose the identity of the bandit, but that up to the time the message was sent nothing had been discovered. The agent at Stella reports that when the train passed that station this morning he saw a man standing on the rear platform of the sleeper, but is unable to give much of a description of him. When the train passed over the crossing there was no one in sight and it is presumed that he had entered the car and was getting ready to begin operations.

MOISE IS A MODERN AJAX

Colonel Makes Good His Military Title by Defeating the Democratic Lightening.

Pending the expected call for a meeting of the democratic county committee to provide for the holding of primaries and a county convention for the selection of a delegation to the state convention, Colonel Walter Moise, who has his Poynter delegation, recently selected by the county committee, securely in pickle, is not saying anything about what he proposes to do in the matter of primaries.

"I'm darned if I know," said he when asked whether or not he proposed to stand pat with the delegation already selected. "I'm awfully busy just now and can't talk to you about it. I'm not talking very much about it, anyhow, just at this stage of the game."

In conversation with a democratic friend on the street, however, Oil Inspector Fanning, who is strategist for Colonel Moise, was heard to declare that the property of the delegation recently appointed are going to stand pat. This will, of course, mean a doubleheader at the state convention from Douglas county, for if the county committee at its expected meeting does not afford the county a majority of opportunity to vote on the selection of a delegation, a convention is pretty certain to be called by democrats outside of the committee and a state delegation selected as the fruits of caucuses or primaries.

Highwayman Holds Up Train

Five Pullman Passengers Relieved of Valuables by a Solitary Bandit.

Twenty Dollars and a Watch Secured.

Occupants of Berths Succeed in Seizing the Larger Part of Their Property—No Use to the Thief's Identity.

Five passengers, occupants of the Pullman sleeper on the Missouri Pacific train from Kansas City, which reached Omaha at 6:15 yesterday morning, were victims of a holdup committed by a lone highwayman while the train was running between Verdon and Stella shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The passengers were J. W. Orr of Atchison, assistant general attorney of the Missouri Pacific; S. G. Sprague of Atchison, traveling auditor of the Missouri Pacific; Mr. and Mrs. Simon C. Ayer of Omaha and O. J. Frederick of Kansas City.

The net proceeds of the highwayman's venture were about $20 in cash and a handsome gold watch and chain, the property of Mr. Sprague. Shortly after leaving Verdon at 2:10 a. m., the Missouri Pacific train slowed up at the crossing of the Burlington tracks. A moment later the rear door of the sleeper was opened and the robber entered. He had the appearance of a young man, although his face was concealed behind a white flesh mask and his hands were encased in gloves. For this reason it was impossible to tell whether he was a white man or a negro. He was about five feet four inches tall, and weighed apparently 130 pounds.

The Pullman conductor, John Finnelly, was the first man encountered. Trusting a big revolver in his face, the robber commanded him to turn on the lights and lead the way through the car, throwing back the curtains from the berths having occupants. Mr. Finnelly complied with the command, which was made extremely eloquent by the threatening proximity of the robber's revolver.

Mr. Sprague the First Victim.

Mr. Sprague's berth was the first reached and that gentleman was rudely awakened from his sleep with the command to "dig up your valuables, and be quick about it." Mr. Sprague parted with his valuable gold watch and chain, and reaching into his trousers' pocket handed therefrom $10 in money.

"Is that all?" questioned the highwayman in a nicely modulated voice, the avoidance of harshness and profanity being particularly noticeable.

"Well, here's my pass book," said Mr. Sprague, drawing it from his vest pocket, "but the transportation won't do you any good."

"No, I'll pass that," said the robber, proceeding to the next berth.

Mr. Sprague breathed a sigh of relief, for beside his pass the small wallet contained $50 in currency.

Attorney Orr was the next victim. He parted with his pass book containing a number of railroad passes and about $5 in money.

Through the womanly foresight and discretion of Mrs. Ayer the robber did not see a rich harvest from the Omaha man and his wife, as the night before prior to retiring Mrs. Ayer had secreted in the berth all of the valuables and money carried by her husband, with the exception of $25, which was handed over to the bandit without protest.

Bandit Becomes Nervous.

By this time the bandit had apparently become nervous, as the train was proceeding at a rapid pace, and he evidently feared that he would be carried past the point where he had intended to alight. Because of this nervousness Mr. Frederick, the last passenger in the car, was roughly handled. Arriving at his berth the robber shook him vigorously, but Mr. Frederick was in a deep slumber and the rough treatment dazed him. He didn't respond immediately to the robber's command that he "dig up," and the highwayman pushed his revolver into the berth and fired it. The report of the explosion was terrific and the other passengers were horrified, fearing that a tragedy had been enacted. Whether intentionally or not the bullet missed Mr. Frederick a couple of

HONOLULU A MODERN CITY

Hawaiian Capital Supplied with All the Conveniences of American Towns.

CONDITIONS FAVORABLE TO PROSPERITY

Only People on Earth Who Succeeded in Stamping Out the Bubonic Plague—President Botic Is Popular.

C. H. Dickey of Maui island, Hawaiian group, arrived in the city Thursday and is the guest of his brother, Colonel J. J. Dickey, superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph company. Mr. Dickey leaves this evening for his home in the Hawaiian islands, and will be accompanied by Master Jay Dickey, who will spend the summer months on those islands.

Mr. Dickey has lived in the Hawaiian islands for twenty-eight years, and is at present assessor for the four central islands of the group. He was a member of the legislature during the regime of Queen Liliuokalani.

"The people are all pleased with the permanent government," said Mr. Dickey, in discussing Hawaiian affairs. "There are from 10,000 to 12,000 Canadians in the islands. The census has not been taken for six years, but the population is estimated at 140,000. About 40,000 of these are natives, 30,000 Japanese, 20,000 Chinese and 15,000 Portuguese. There are about 1,000 Americans by the last census, but I believe there are many more now. The purer natives are dying off, as the race is intermarrying with all classes of foreigners. These races are rapidly becoming amalgamated and could now properly be called American. There are educational qualifications for voters, and 90 per cent of the population of the islands can read or write. Japanese and Chinese cannot vote. There are four English daily newspapers, one Hawaiian daily and three weeklies over there. We use more telephones comparatively than are used here. Almost every house has a telephone, even the poorer classes having them. There are no poor in the islands, though. In all Hawaii there is not a beggar."

Natives Are Industrious.

"Work is plenty and the natives are splendid workers when they work. Like all tropical races, though, they like resting spells. Sugar raising is the main industry of the country, the output being about 300,000 tons a year. We also raise fine coffee and rice, but export little of either. There are no oak or hickory trees in the land, but of nearly all other varieties we have samples. The country has good roads and good schools. For the last fifteen years the instruction has been in English. Our laws are printed in both English and Hawaiian. The laws have been left almost intact since annexation and we have an excellent system of jurisprudence, excelled by no state unless it be New York. In making it we selected from the laws of all the states.

"We have all religions, even Mormonism, but polygamy is not practiced. There are no white Mormons. White missionaries of that sect came to the islands and converted some of the natives. The denomination with the largest following is the Congregational, Catholicism is next. The natives are quick to learn, but somewhat deficient in practical ability. Most all our policemen are natives and there are also native doctors, lawyers and preachers. The Hawaiians are natural actors and singers, good natured and easily led.

The Bubonic Plague.

"We are the only people who have ever stamped out the bubonic plague and are proud of this record. Since the disease has broken out in San Francisco the government has sent a physician to Hawaii to learn how we handled it. It cost us about $2,000,000 to get rid of it. It broke out in December and lasted till April, although it never became epidemic. There were seventy-one cases in Honolulu, about the fourth of the city being infected. Fifteen blocks of buildings were burned, besides numerous isolated residences. It is a rat disease, and these animals must be killed to get rid of it. In not one of our cases could it be shown that the disease was taken from another person who had it. All who had it were quarantined by themselves. No one was allowed to leave Honolulu. The bodies of the dead were cremated. Thousands of persons had the prophylactic serum, which is a preventive, injected into them. There is also a curative serum which is used when it is known that one has the plague. I think that it will soon spread east. I do not think that San Francisco can ever be quarantined so as to prohibit its spreading. Wherever rats are it will go, though of course a rat prefers an unsanitary place. One may live for three days after he is stricken. A few recover, but it is frequently the case that they die the day that it is found that they have it.

"We are the only country that has ever taken care of our hospitals. There are about 1,000 of them and they are kept on a flat neck of land, behind which is a high cliff. All conveniences possible are provided for the unfortunate ones. Band concerts and entertainments are given for them and amusements provided. It is said that if the law would allow them to return to their homes that not more than 100 would avail themselves of the opportunity.

"All were much pleased with President Dole and every one is glad that we are now a territory of the United States and have a stable government. The natives celebrate the Fourth of July even more enthusiastically than is done here. They prefer it to all the holidays."

"After suffering from piles for fifteen years I was cured by using two boxes of Dr. Witt's Witch Hazel Salve," writes W. J. Baxter, North Brook, N. C., "it heals everything. Beware of counterfeits."

ATTACKS THE ICE COMPANY

Attorney General Asks that It Be Prohibited from Doing Business.

SAYS IT IS AN UNLAWFUL COMBINATION

Case Will Not Be Brought to Trial for Some Weeks, However, and Consumers Must Keep on Paying Trust Prices.

The war between consumers of ice and the alleged trust that furnishes it is on in the courts. C. J. Smyth, attorney general for Nebraska, has filed suit in the district court against the Reservoir Ice company, charging that it is existing in violation of the state law relative to combinations.

The petition is a voluminous document covering several typewritten pages. Shorn of the legal verbiage with which the petition abounds the attorney general asks the courts to declare the defendant company not entitled to transact business and that it be prohibited from further continuing in its sale and delivery of ice. It is set forth that in last December the ice dealers of Omaha entered into a consolidation under the name of the Reservoir Ice company, and that it was the intent in making such arrangement to raise the price of ice and to control it by combined force. The companies named as co-defendants are the Seymour Lake Artesian Ice company, the Arctic Ice company, the Kimball Ice company and others. It is further set forth that, with one or two exceptions, there is not an independent ice establishment in the city and that it is impossible for all consumers to be served by those independent concerns.

The attorney general enters into a lengthy showing of law upon which he bases his suit. The case will not be reached by either of the equity courts for several weeks, and meanwhile there can be no action to interfere with the sale of ice by the alleged unlawful conspiracy.

It is said that a conference was held between the attorney general and representatives of the Reservoir Ice company just before the suit was filed, but no terms of compromise could be agreed upon.

It was announced several days ago in the office of the attorney general that the litigation would be taken direct to the supreme court, but after returning from St. Paul, where Mr. Smyth was called on another case, he decided to begin action in the local courts. It is understood that the defendant will employ a formidable array of legal talent to combat the charges made by the attorney general.

LIBRARIANS GO TO MONTREAL

Meeting of the American Library Association to Be Attended by a Number of Nebraskans.

The meeting of the American Library Association at Montreal, Quebec, will be attended by several people from this section engaged in library work. Miss Tobitt, librarian of the Omaha Public Library, will start for Montreal the end of this week, with Miss Dennis, librarian of the Lincoln Public Library, as her traveling companion, and will visit New York and several other eastern cities before her return. Miss Margaret O'Brien of the Omaha Public Library, Mrs. Dallery, librarian of the Council Bluffs city library, and Mr. Wyr, as head of the State University Library at Lincoln, will also go to Montreal.

A special invitation to the trustees' section, which holds an adjunct meeting, has been received by Victor Rosewater of the Omaha Public Library directory, but he will not be able to attend the session this year. A number of the Omaha members of the American Library association are recipients of invitations to participate in the library congress to be held in connection with the Paris exposition this summer.

The Omaha Public Library is entertaining as a visitor Miss Body, a young woman from Grand Island, who is staying at the work and methods preparatory to taking charge of the public library there.

NEW WAY TO COLLECT RENTS

Trate Landlord Charged With Throwing Outliers at Delinquent Tenants.

M. C. Hurlburt, who until the last few days, has lived with his wife and mother-in-law, Mrs. Lincoln, at 1131 North Eighteenth street, is a legitimate actor. He traveled last season with the Woodward Stock company, playing the villain in "Charlie's Aunt" and other pieces of the repertoire, but on account of an accident, caused by a drop curtain falling on him, he was compelled to retire from the stage and is now putting down carpets at so much per square yard.

"Are you the prosecutor?" he asked, dragging his toes into the presence of that functionary. "Well, I've called to see you in regard to an outrage of which I and my family are the innocent victims."

"Tell your story," said Attorney Thomas.

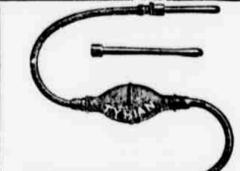

Mr. Hurlburt's story, minus the gestures, poses, facial grimaces and flowery periods of his craft, is in substance this: He was behind with his rent. His landlord, Fred Trotterman, a hack driver, had come to the house while he (Hurlburt) was away and had ordered the family out, also the family of M. D. Boyle, which occupies a part of it. Only the three women, Mesdames Lincoln, Hurlburt and Boyle, were present and they refused to go. Then, he says, Trotterman seized a chair and struck Mrs. Lincoln with it.

The three frightened women took refuge in a corner. In the middle of the room was a table upon which were the remains of breakfast. Trotterman stepped up to it, says the therapist, gathered up an armful of cutlery and began hurling it piece by piece at the cowering women. Finally he came to a sharp-pointed butcher knife which he threw with such skill that it stuck quivering in the leg of Mrs. Boyle. Apparently satisfied the knife juggler then retired.
