The Terminal company track occupying the right of way involved was laid by the Union Pacific. Later the land across which it runs was soid to the Detroit syndicate and still later the Union l Pacific sold the track to the Terminal company. The dispute now is as to which company owns the track. It is said to be conceded that the Detroit syndicate owns the embankment, but the railroad company claims the track. This is, however, denied by the syndicate, which claims to have come into possession of it when it acquired the land. About two-thirds of the property in controversy lies in Iowa and the balance in Nebraska. Similar proceedings are pending
