

BETTER BUSINESS TRAINING

High School Commercial Course Likely to be Lengthened to Four Years.

ISN'T COMPREHENSIVE ENOUGH NOW

America's New Possessions Make it Necessary that Young Men Be Prepared for Work Among Spanish-Speaking People.

"Business colleges and commercial high schools in the United States have been engaged in educating clerks and stenographers, but have turned out few men who were actually fitted for business life. The tendency has been toward proficiency in clerical work and there has been little attention paid to instruction in studies that fit men to become the heads of business houses."

"Our new possessions make it necessary that young men be prepared for work among Spanish-speaking people and the commercial courses must be revised in such a manner that they will meet the new requirements. In high schools the commercial course has ordinarily been similar to the English course, with the exception of a few such electives as bookkeeping and commercial law. A new course must be provided that will afford four years of special training for business."

"The University of Pennsylvania has established a college of finance and commerce and the University of Wisconsin is organizing a similar college. The courses of these colleges are fashioned to a certain degree after European ideas. Mr. Pearce believes that it will be but a short time until the high schools of the larger cities will establish similar departments. Such a plan was discussed in Chicago and met with much favor, but was delayed for lack of funds. Mr. Pearce has such a course in mind for the Omaha schools and will endeavor to plan the commercial course in such a manner that it can readily be lengthened to a four-year course."

MRS. WELLER'S CLOSE CALL

Omaha Woman Has a Narrow Escape from Death in a Coaching Accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Weller have returned from a trip of several weeks through the west, which included visits to the leading resorts on the Pacific coast. Returning they stopped in Colorado and while attending a convention of druggists at Colorado Springs in early June Mrs. Weller met with a painful accident that necessitated her remaining in Denver until Saturday. One of the features of the entertainment to visitors to the convention was a ride about the city of Colorado Springs and the adjacent points of interest. At the head of the line of carriages was a trolley, in which Colonel D. Y. Wheeler, one of the commercial travelers for the Richardson Drug company, was entertaining a party of women. Mrs. Weller being one of the party. The team attached to this vehicle ran away, overturning it and injuring nearly every one of the women. Mrs. Weller sustained a severely sprained ankle and Colonel Wheeler sustained bruises from which he is still under treatment in Denver.

"It was a miracle," says Mr. Weller, "that they were not all killed and in fact one of the women was so severely injured that she will probably never recover. It was one of those peculiarly unfortunate combinations of things. The accident occurred June 13 and there were just thirteen in the trolley beside the driver. It was probably not due to the sagacity of the four horses that the party was turned out just in front of the home of Judge Lunt of Colorado Springs, one of the finest homes in the city, which was at once turned into a hospital. Hardly had the unfortunate been rescued from the wreck before Mrs. Lunt had telephoned down town for her family physician, directing him to bring all of the doctors he could summon. "One peculiar incident in connection with the accident was contributed by Mrs. John Anglum, wife of a prominent druggist of Denver. She saw the horses start to run with their load and without a thought of her surroundings she threw herself upon her knees and lifted her voice in prayer for the deliverance of the women in peril."
