BRINGING OUT OF WATTSOON

How He Was Made Temporary Chairman of the Tilden Convention.

GEORGE L. MILLER'S PART IN THE AFFAIR

Nebraska Man Tells How the Choice Was Made and Corrects a Mistake Made by Colonel McClure.

To the Editor of The Bee: I am indebted to you for the personal favor of calling my attention to Colonel Alexander McClure's book, "Our Presidents and How We Make Them," and also for lending me the book itself, which I am reading with interest. It purports to be, and is an interesting history of national conventions in the United States, and of the ways in which candidates for president have been nominated. But if Colonel McClure is a lot more accurate in his account of national conventions in general than he is in that which he gives in his book of the national convention of 1876, which nominated Mr. Tilden, it will bear, in the interest of the truth of history, considerable revision.

Colonel McClure says of this convention as follows: "Henry Watterson was temporary chairman and was succeeded by General John A. McClelland as permanent presiding officer. . . . It (the convention) was thoroughly organized (by Mr. Tilden and his friends) before it met."

Executive Committee's Action.

Nothing could be further from the truth than the statement I was a member of the executive committee of the national committee, of which Abram S. Hewitt was the chairman, at that convention, and I am perfectly familiar with the fact that nothing was done or said in New York by Mr. Tilden about it until 4 days after Mr. McClelland was elected permanent presiding officer. . . . It (the convention) was thoroughly organized (by Mr. Tilden and his friends) before it met."

At the school election, F. M. King, Charles Fouke and E. H. Walker were elected members of the School Board, Fouke and Walker getting the long term. Jay F. Davis and wife of Cherokee, Ia., are visiting Mrs. Davis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Banks. Mr. Davis is a clerk in the train mail office of the Illinois Central railway at Chicago.

Pleasure Past.

Mrs. G. H. Payne gave a children's party on Thursday afternoon in honor of her little son, Dick.

Dundee.

Rev. Mr. Lempe has bought the large brick residence at 424 Davenport street and will put it in thorough repair to occupy it with his family this summer.

The heavy winds of this week have created considerable havoc with the maple trees in the streets of the village, several of the larger ones being broken off at the ground.

A few friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Selby joined with them in a lawn party on the afternoon and evening of the Fourth. A delicious supper was served, followed by a dance in the evening.

The Fourth of July was ushered in by about fifty men and boys of the village with the ringing of the school bell and the firing of a salute on the hill at Fifty-first and Davenport streets, and a display of fireworks at 3 o'clock the morning.

Mr. Randall Fuller returned to his home at Fullerton, Neb. Fuller remains with her daughter, Mrs. W. S. Curtis, for a little longer visit. Mr. Fuller, while abroad, was unable to visit Palestine, as contemplated, by the existence of the war, but his trip included Paris, London, Belgium and Germany.

At Glenwood Springs.

GLENSWOOD SPRINGS, Colo., July 7.—To the Editor of The Bee:—Those tourists who were thoughtful and wise enough to journey to Glenwood Springs during the recent hot stage, which seems to have prevailed in most parts of the country, are now congratulating themselves. While on other points of view, wintering they were enabled to keep delightfully cool. They walk or ride through the shady canons, swim in the pool, lounge on the banks of the noisy Grand or listen to the concert on the broad, sheltered veranda of the hotel.

Another Incident Set Right. Colonel McClure falls into a curious mistake about an exciting incident of the convention when he tells how a duel between General Morgan of Ohio and Colonel Breckenridge of Kentucky, which the colonel says was only avoided by Colonel Watterson hurrying Colonel Breckenridge off to dinner and compelling him to make concessions which properly satisfied the Ohio warrior. Colonel McClure is wholly mistaken about this matter. He is entirely mixed up, so to say. The affair was not between Colonel Breckenridge and General Morgan at all. The collision was between Colonel Watterson and General Morgan and Colonel Breckenridge did the peacemaking. I was within five feet of Colonel Watterson when General Morgan, over the floor, and what Colonel Watterson accepted as an insult. He instantly left the chair. I stopped him as he was hurrying along on the platform and asked him what the trouble was. He replied, "Morgan of Ohio has offered me an insult. I will call him out." And away he rushed to the center of the Kentucky delegation. The last I saw or heard of the duel was Colonel Breckenridge with his arm around Colonel Watterson's neck, presumably engaged in taming the most obstinate fighting spirit of the country, which was produced.

One of the Gallant Six. "Our boys who were our gallant Six (Iowa regiment), took several bottles of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with him when he sailed to the Philippines," says Mrs. F. D. Reid, Oskaloosa, Iowa. "He used all of it while there. It was the first medicine he called for when he got home. This remedy is an old friend in our family. We have used it for years."

JEALOUSY GETS THEM IN JAIL

Husband and Wife Quarrel Over the Attention Another Should Enjoy from Others.

Arat Kierikoff and wife of 1113 William street were engaged in their usual pastime about each other and disturbing the neighbors when arrested Saturday evening by Officers Devereese and Harold. They were taken to the police station, where both talked at once in a vain endeavor to explain their troubles. Their language was so broken that it could hardly be understood, though it was gathered from their talk that Arat had found his wife drinking beer with two men and kissing them. She did not take time to deny the accusation, but insisted that Arat himself had a young girl to whom he was devoting himself. The controversy was still unsettled when the jail doors closed on the pair. Mrs. Kierikoff made an ineffectual plea for release on the ground that her duck and her little loak required her care, but the hard-hearted sergeant looked her up.
