Eight Hours for Postoffice Clerks. Postmaster Etter was advised yesterday that the Postoffice department is figuring on placing the clerks in this office on the same basis as the carriers in regard to the hours of duty. Carriers work only eight hours a day and the intention is to work the perks the same number of hours if satisfactory arrangements can be made.

At the present time eight clerks are employed in the postoffice here and the outmailing clerks work on an average sixteen hours a day. The amount of mail to be handled by three clerks in this department is so large that long bours are a necessity. it is asserted that by the appointment of two or three more clerks the eight-hour system can be placed in operation here. This plan, it is understood, is heartly favored by Postmaster Etter.
