FOUR FAVORITES WIN OUT

pounded out a parabola which alighted a short distance behind third base. Jimmy Hoy started after it, but, perceiving Joe Wright on the same mission bent, fell all over himself instead, straining his left choulder so hadly that he had to be taken out of the game. The ball fell safely and the bases were full. Dairymple was given a free pass and the first run of this inning was forced in, and that, too, after gilt-edge opportunities for the retirement of the side had been presented. Anderson filed out and then an error of Toman's permitted Closson and Moran to cross the bag. The first part of the act was then completed on a double play, when McVicker caught Johnson's fly and natled Dalrymple to the cross at the third sack.

Toman Gets in the Game.

Omaha's half was productive of a hatful of runs. After O'Rourke went out at first Mattle McVicker was saved the ignominy of his accustomed strike-out by the courtesy of Chief Shrieking Voice Johnson. Bill Wilson singled and Anderson's fumble of a ball batted by Lauzon filled the bases. Captain Jack's bunting to Pitcher Johnson forced McVicker out at home, but Wilson trotted over the bag with a tally, when Johnson routed "Cap" off the initial corner by escorting Wright to that position. Stubby Toman's two-bagger away over Abner Dalrymple's head in left field cleared the bage and brought the Colts' score up to a quintet, or one behind the smeltermen.

The Hulenites didn't do a thing in the seventh but bag another brace and in their half the locals got a goose egg. But there were some happenings in the next act and Mobile Lauzon immortalized himself by pasting out a home run, after the bases had been tilled by Rebsamen's two-bagger, and John-son's free transportation of O'Rourke, who was hit by a pitched ball, and Wilson on four wide ones. Lauzon's timely drive saved a game which seemed irretrievably lost and the loud huzzas that greeted him after he ambled about the bases will ring in his ears for many & day as the sweetest called cooling drinks bring no lasting relief. but rather unduly stimulate a craving for more, until the stomach is wholly demoralized.
