DAME FASHION DINES OUT

Dinners Prove the Chief Divertisement of the Last Seven Days.

SUESTS ENTERTAINED AT COUNTRY CLUB

dospitable Dining Room on Benson Road Solves Problem for the Jaded Hostess-Society Girl Gets a Telegram.

Dinners seem to have become society's one means of entertaining of late. Every night Chase, the dining room at the Country club has been the scene of parties, ranging in numher from four to eight, some of them hav-ing been given in honor of distinguished out-of-town guests while others were only ratherings of a few congenial spirits. Sevral unusually elaborate "family affairs" vere given last week and some half dozen ormal and informal dinners were tendered in honor of Bishop and Mrs. McCabe.

Three fast friends of the younger se were sprawling about the veranda of the ountry club late on Saturday afternoon. was their privilege to sprawl, for they ere men and it was hot. They had taken for the lakes. a shower in the locker room after plodng around the eighty-two acres and felt ce and clean. When their cigarettes had burnt out they meant to join the women at the table d'hote and then there would be dancing. So it was good to be there. They had been talking about a girl. Well-bred men are known to do that-especially they are very young. The boy in the golf-pink" coat, glowing as a firebrand, had the floor. "You wouldn't mind her awinging a scepter around at summer resorts and Lincoln and such places," he her old home in Illinois. 'I think the men like her because she ean't care; she wort of takes it for granted that the world is at her feet and she deigns walk along over it with a sort of golf tide. Virgil's 'Dea progreditur,' 'the godas stalks,' is about the way to describe it course she's pretty, that's a long story, there isn't any self-consciousness abou she enjoys herself like a child. Well, not the fever with the rest, and when I found my brains and earthly goods weren' ) ravy enough to make her happy-she mply has to have unlimited coin, you l now-I sort of stood around like a fellow who's lost at a faro game and is watching the others play.

he still knows me, you know, because every week or two she hasn't anything better to do, and the other day I cheered up enough to play a joke. It was a flat little joe's when it started, but it got better as went along. The girl had gone down to Lincoln because she was a little bored by Lernox, who is high man just now. I happer d to be at the depot the next morning there was Lennox getting into a Lincoin train. I knew there would be some when he got there because Watson, ni man, bas a little money, too. "Winn the girl was looking up a tim card to see when the train left the clerk remarke I sympathetically that she might telephone and have the meesage repeated. She adn't thought of that; it was a chance to relieve her feelings. She told the telegraph office that the message was very important and had been wilfully sent astray. The operator said he could read the copy over hone if the lady wished and the girl said the did. She took hold of something and wondered whether she would faint. Then the fellow read: "Lennox starts. Release Watson. Lock up your jewels and call a policeman. THE RIVALS.

"The operator had the nerve to laugh 'Can you understand all right?' he asked. The girl hung up the receiver with a jerk She forgot to be happy about her mother not being dead. Now she is living for one thing. She wants to find the man who did it and cut him off the list. "Who do you think will win in the long run?" asked one of the three. 'Why, I will myself," answered the scarlet-corted youth, looking very serious.

Loings at the Country Club The Country club is rapidly losing its formality. This is particularly noticable in the afternoon, when the golfers come in from the links and gather about the plans for coon songs or draw their chairs into a circle for stories and gossip. The Modern Fountain of Youth. Ponce De Leon sought the fabled fountain of youth in the wilderness of a new world, and, although he never found it, tired humanity still clings to the time-worn tralition and the countless seekers after health and beauty still journey up and down the earth. The long lost fountain is still lost, but the ingenuity and scientific inventions of the nineteenth century bid fair to supply a substitute which shall answer everpurpose. The Renstrom Hygiene Bath Co., operating the ladies' bathery in The Bee building, furnishes a case in point. The system is entirely new, yet the principles applied are old, a combination treatment of Turkish bath, massage and electricity. The renewal of youth and beauty through the renewal or preservation of health is not an irridescent dream. It is an established fact to which many ladies of Omaha can The Renetrom system is based upon scientific principles; it is delightfully invigorating, and, like an elixir of new life rebuilds the system and restores the bloom of youth. The baths alone are superb, and the treatment is a wonderful revelation Expert lady operators and a lady's maid are always at your service. Specimens of Omeha's Scrip Now Preserved Miss Becher of Columbus, Neb., who has in Public Library.

Paper to the Amount of $60,000 issued in the Fifties for the Construction of New Buildings.

Among the scrip in the Byron Reed collection of the Omaha public library are three specimens of paper money that the city of Omaha issued in 1857. The three notes are for $1, $3 and $5 and pledge the city property of Omaha for their redemption in one year, with interest at the rate of 10 per cent. They are very similar to the paper money of the government in appearance and bear the signatures of Jesse Lowe and H. C. Anderson, who were mayor and recorder of the city at that time.

Omaha's municipal government dates from March, 1857, when the first municipal election was held. The councilmen and other officers found themselves in charge of a town that had great ambitions and limited funds. The slender treasury of Omaha had been emptied for the purpose of building the old capitol, which stood on the grounds now occupied by the High school,

May 26, 1857, Councilman G. C. Bovey who assisted Major George Armstrong in erecting the new capitol, introduced and secured the passage of a resolution empowering the mayor to proceed with the erection of the new building and granting him the right to use all available city funds, to sell lands set aside for that purpose, and to use the city's credit. Money came into the treasury slowly, and, on June 23, the mayor was authorized to secure plates and have $30,000 worth of scrip issued, after having entered into a contract with different banks for its circulation and redemption.

In August of the same year the mayor was instructed to increase the amount of scrip to $50,000, and arrangements were perfected for the circulation of the paper which made the completion of the territorial capitol possible. The following men and firms received and protected the scrip in the amounts set opposite their names: A. U Wyman, $5,000; Samuel Moffatt, $5,000; F M. Akin, $5,000; F. Gridley & Co., $5,000 G. C. Monell, $3,000; William Young Brown

Build Hotel with Scrip.

The Farnam Street Hotel company was building the Herndon house, which now forms a portion of the building on Farnam and Ninth streets used as headquarters for the Union Pacific, and ran short of funds to complete the building. All the people of Omaha were pleased with the enterprise which prompted the erection of such a pretentious hotel and fell in with the council's plan of issuing $10,000 worth of scrip to make its completion possible. The bankers who circulated the first $50,000 worth of Omaha scrip expressed a willingness to circulate the additional $10,000. The city took a mortgage on the hotel to secure the loan of the money and issued the scrip

September 22. This made $60,000 the city had raised by this means. The hard times of 1857 came on; the money market became close; the government failed to reimburse the city for the money spent on the new territorial capitol building, and the city found itself without means of redeeming these obligations. On December 24, 1857, an election was held, at which the voters authorized the council to leave bonds to the amount of $57,500 with which to retire the scrip, and in a short time the only paper money ever issue by the city of Omaha was out of circulation

Council Had Stormy Sessions. Omaha's pioneer council had many stormy sessions during the first few months of it existence. Meetings were held almost every day, and more time was consumed in cor ducting the affairs of the frontier village of 500 people than is required for the trans action of the city's business since it has increased in size 300 times. The members of the original council were: A. D. Jones T. G. Goodwill, G. C. Bovey, H. H. Vischer Thomas Davis, William U. Wyman, William N. Byers, C. H. Downs and Thomas O'Con-Jesse Lowe was the first mayor of the town; H. C. Anderson was recorder; Lyman Richardson, assessor, and J. A. Miller was city marshal. The construction of the new capitol caused most of the dissension and $110,000 of city funds was finally invested n the building. Although the scrip issued by this council was similar to United States paper money of that period, different pictures were used for the engravings and the figures denoting the denomination of the notes are much larger. Over the entire surface of the scrip the denomination of the notes is printed in small letters. The engravings on the notes vary, but most of them contain and Makes Her Neighbors Like it. Mrs. Amelia Schaffer, who resides at 1322

Webster street, enjoys nothing more-than to retire to the privacy of her back porch and devote a few hours every evening to playing the accordion and singing the songs of the fatherland. A number of neighbors gathered around Wednesday evening to listen to the sweet music and they heartlip applauded some of the selections. Mrs. Schaffer took this as a demonstration of dicapproval and reported to the police station that her neighbors were in the habit and devote a few hours every evening to One Minute Cough Cure to the only Schaffer took this as a demonstration of barmless remedy that produces immediate disapproval and reported to the police sta-throughout the Summer months. of bothering her. Officer Baldwin was sent out to investigate and he found the facts purchased. to be substantially as stated above with the addition that Mrs. Schaffer had tried to annihilate her admirers with an array of bricks, tin cans and old shoes, which she threw at them with more or less accuracy. Saturday night Mrs. Schaffer started her usual concert and as the neighbors were assembling with the apparent intention of repeating the performance of the previous evening Mr. Schaffer begged his wife to degist and avoid trouble. But she would have none of his advice and gave him a severe whipping, the marks of which he will carry for many days. Officer Sauers arrested the weman and she was held at the city jail for trial Monday.

Last Thursday, July 19, the Feast of Saint Vincent de Paul was celebrated with becoming solemnity at St. James' orphanage, Benson. The feast opened with selemn high mass at 9 o'clock, the celebrant being Father Carroll, director of St. Vincent's union; the deacon, Father McGovern of the Cathedral, and the sub-deacon, Father Harrington of St. Cecilia's church, Walnut Hill. Quite a number of people from the city were present at the mass.

The Feast of Saint Vincent de Paul is the annual visiting and donation day at the orphanage. Saint Vincent is the patron saint of the union, which was established in March, 1896, for the benefit of the orphanage. In the afternoon, in the presence of the visitors, a drawing for a number of articles took place.
