MERCHANTS SUFFER IN ARMY POST TOWNS

Tradesmen Who Relied Largely on Soldiers' Patronage Are Compelled to Go Out of Business -Canteens' Good Effect.

Captain Barrington K. West, chief commissary of the Department of the Missouri. has under his control the provisioning of all of the garrisons in the department and of several in other departments. The commissary department is likened to the steward's department in a large hotel, where supplies are purchased upon the basis of the present condition of trade, and an unexpected influx of guests makes it necessary to provide for double the number anticipated. The husiness of the commissary is quite different from that in the quartermaster's departmen The latter officer purchases supplies which are not easily destroyed, while the commissary supplies are of the perishable class. For this reason purchases must be made oftener. The longest period made for contracts in this department is for dressed beef. which covers a period of six months. Many supplies are purchased quarterly, but the greatest amount is bought by the month.

The quarterly purchases include flour and canned goods, generally, while the monthly include vegetables, cheese and other open stores. The quarterly commates are being made out at present. They are for about half the quantity required last year because of the reduction in the number of the troops in the dpeartment, but they are much larger than the estimates of July, 1898, when there were but a dozen men at Fort Crook and about the same number at the other posts for which provisions are purchased by the Dmaha commissary.

Country Merchants Suffer.

"The reduction in the number of troops In the department is having a bad effect upon the business in towns near the various posts," said an army officer. "At some of tire charge of them. Their transportation, their sleeping car the character of the business conducted by berths and all matters of that kind are the men who cater to the soldiers' trade has changed. Before the canteen system was introduced almost every 'store' had an annex where strong liquor was sold to the soldier sub rosa. The real business of the alleged merchant was so concealed that conviction was almost impossible, where the merchant was guilty of breaking the revenue laws, for many of them held government and state licenses which were produced when trouble French, Rotterdam, Red Star and Thingwas about to come. Now the soldiers seem to prefer drinking beer on the military reservation to drinking whiskey in the towns and there is not half the trouble with drunkenness as formerly."
