

POLICE MAKE A GOOD CATCH

Pair of Dangerous Crooks, with Female Accomplice, Landed Behind Bars.

BELONGED TO GENUS 'ROOMWORKERS'

Officers Confident that Their Operations in Omaha Have Been Immensely Profitable—Both Men Have Records.

The four sergeants of the police force have been having their fun and have landed a pair of dangerous crooks and their female confederate. The men, professionally known as "roomworkers," have been terrorizing the residence districts for at least two weeks and their loot is estimated in the hundreds of dollars.

PECULIARITIES OF THE "ROOMWORKER."

A "roomworker" is a first cousin of the "porchcrawler" and a classmate of the "son man." Belonging to the eclectic school of criminology, he combines all the best elements of burglary and sneak-thievery, with a minimum of danger and a maximum of revenue.

MURPHY IS TAKEN IN.

Smooth as it was, this North Seventeenth street job was the beginning of the end of Murphy's criminal career in Omaha, for it happened that Mrs. Carrigan gave an excellent description of him to the police.
