

The Wholesalers and Manufacturers

F. A. RINEHART.

Picture Man to the Court of Ak-Sar-Ben.

THOSE who have traveled the rocky road to the palace of the grand mufti will need no introduction to the royal photographer, the man with the camera. Mr. Rinehart is one of those cheerful citizens who believes that every knight should get a picture, and, with this one object always in view, he seldom misses a fair shot. His duties at the Den sometimes cover a wide bunch of subjects and the many fine groups which he has taken can testify to his excellent work. Thousands of handsome men have looked pleasant in front of his camera and not a single man has ever kicked for a second sitting. Mr. Rinehart's studio at 1520 Douglas street is one of the finest in the west and his famous collection of Indian photographs and curios has a national reputation. He makes a specialty of artistic portraits and the name of "Rinehart" upon a photograph is a guaranty of excellence in pose, tone and finish. Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben, their ladies and their friends from out of town are cordially invited to visit the studio.

The Harding Paper Stock Co.

One of the new enterprises in Omaha is the Harding Paper Stock company, with offices and warehouses at 1309-1311 Leavenworth street; Sam Harding, president, and F. C. Kaufman, secretary and general manager. This company occupies an entirely new field in the west, handling a product which has formerly gone almost entirely to waste, viz.: the old paper which accumulates in printing offices and other commercial houses. This waste paper is collected from almost the entire west, sorted, baled and shipped to the mills of the east, where it goes into the new stock of which it forms a large portion. A force of nearly 100 people are employed at the Omaha plant in receiving, handling, sorting, baling and shipping this product and the present commodious quarters are already badly crowded. In fact the business has assumed such proportions during the short time since its incorporation that it has recently been deemed advisable to put upon the market the $50,000 of treasury stock for the purpose of securing additional capital to increase and properly handle the rapidly growing business. The business so far done by this company proves that its stock will easily earn 10 per cent, making it one of the best investments in the city today. Those who are interested will find the books of the company open to their inspection and the management ready with any information which may be required.

THE JOHN DEERE PLOW CO.

One of Leading Agricultural Implement and Vehicle Houses of West.
The John Deere Plow company is just completing an addition to its immense new building at Tenth and Leavenworth streets. The west half of this structure will be completed during this fall when the company will remove their offices and sales-room to the fourth floor, which will be entered from the Tenth street viaduct. The John Deere Plow company are particularly fortunate in their location for a business of this nature, being situated in the heart of the wholesale district and within half a block of the union passenger station. The building extends from Ninth to Tenth street, being 264 feet in length and having side tracks on either side which are exclusively controlled by this company, affording shipping facilities unequalled by any house in the west.
The John Deere Plow company of Omaha represents extensive manufacturing interests at Moline, Ill., having full control of the territory tributary to Omaha, which includes western Iowa, the entire state of Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming and Idaho, and handling a full line of the celebrated John Deere plows, harrows, sulky plows, gang plows, riding and walking cultivators. Deere & Co., of Moline, Ill., are acknowledged to be the largest plow manufacturers in the world, employing 1,500 men in their shops; founded by John Deere in 1847, who gave to the world the steel plow.
Another large concern represented is The Deere & Mansur company, also of Moline, Ill., which employs upwards of 800 men and manufactures the well known Deere planters, check rowers, disc harrows, hay loaders, hay rakes, power corn shellers, corn huskers and shredders and various smaller implements.
This concern also represents the Moline Wagon company, which employs 500 men and manufactures about 20,000 Moline wagons per year; being the largest factory in the world engaged exclusively in the manufacture of farm wagons. In addition to the above named lines of goods they also carry an immense stock of vehicles of all kinds, including top buggies, surreys, stanhopes, cabriolets, road wagons, road carts, also feed mills, among which may be mentioned the celebrated Corn King.

Their connections enable this company to handle a large volume of business in carload lots direct from factory to customer, which offers unsurpassed inducements in reduced freight charges, making it possible for western buyers to get a large line and variety of goods in single shipments.

This firm, though young, is one of the leaders in their line of this city, comprising the old houses of L. Kirscht, sr., and Frick & Herbertz, whom they succeeded on July 1, 1898.

From the start they have done a wonderful business, which is steadily increasing to this date, such a record shows only too well their popularity, integrity and honest endeavor to please their patrons. The firm consists of Herman H. Vermehren, Andrew N. Frick and John F. Meyer. Since their formation of partnership their city trade has largely increased as well as their country trade. They are daily adding new territory. Give them a call and you will be pleased.

The Carpenter Paper Co.

One of the leading wholesale houses in the west is The Carpenter Paper company. The Carpenter Brothers opened a small paper house in this city in 1887 and their business has steadily increased until today they sell paper from the Mississippi river to the Pacific coast.

A general line of paper is carried, including wrapping paper and in recent years a considerable business has been done with small jobbers throughout the west. A complete assortment of printer's stock is carried, together with a line of fine stationery which compares favorably with Chicago and St. Louis houses. The splendid building at Twelfth and Howard streets is filled from top floor to basement with a complete stock suitable to the needs of western trade.

CREAMERY PACKAGES.

Creamery Package Manufacturing Company.

In the spring of 1898 this company opened up here in a rather quiet way and in the very short time of two years they have grown to their present magnificent proportions, occupying the spacious five-story building at 1067-9-11 Jones street where they do a business of $35,000 to $40,000 per month, not a bad showing for such a short time.

The company are general sales agents for DeLaval Alpha Separators, Wells & Richardson's butter colors, Disbrow & Fargoe's combined churns and workers, Goshen steel tanks and Curtis' channel bottom vats. They are sole manufacturers of the Ideal balanced-valve engines, Ideal steel frame Babcock testers, Ideal automatic skim milk weighers, and other standard dairy devices. Their handmade white ash butter tubs, made at their Mankato factory, are recognized as the best on the market. They furnish boilers, engines, separators, shafting, pulleys, belting, vats, churns, egg cases and creamery and cheese factory supplies of every kind, at lowest market prices, their trade extending northwest to the Pacific coast. S. Love Kelley, the manager, is most popular with the business men of the city, being a member of the Commercial Club and also one of the "hustling committees" of the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben.

The Novelty Manufacturing Company.
