AN EASTERN COMPLIMENT.

Boston Transcript. Edward Rosewater, editor of The Omaha Bee, has won a signal victory in the primaries of his county in an open contest for supremacy. He is a candidate for the United States senatorship and insisted that the nominees for the legislature should be openly chosen with express reference to the senatorship. Two other candidates contested for the honor, although both were reluctant to engage in that sort of test. The result was that Mr. Rosewater's ticket carried every ward in the city and bids fair to be elected because of its excellent material. Mr. Rosewater has upheld sound republican principles in Nebraska for thirty years without a reward and his success in this contest would only be fitting and creditable to his state.
