PRICES ARE BEING WELL MAINTAINED

Hardware Market Firm.

Hardware jobbers are now busy rushing out their fail goods. The cooler weather has made merchants anxious to get in their winter goods and particularly is this true of dealers in the far west, who are obliged to haul their supplies long distances in wagons. The better feeling existing regarding future prices is causing merchants to buy more freely and to anticipate their future wants more than they have done in several months. Taking into consideration the fact that trade has been heavy throughout the summer, when retailers were buying in a hand-te-mouth way, jobbers figure that they should do an immense business now that the market is in good strong position with no fear of lower prices.

Although the market is firmer there have not been many changes during the last week. The only one worthy of mention is an advance of about 5 per cent in galvanized sheet from Practically all staples, however, are very firm at present prices and it would not be surprising, in view of the heavy demand, should higher prices rule on a number of lines in the near future.

And the control of th

terior points. The hope that the Galveston relief measures made last week's movement abnormal is dissipated by this week's larger movement, demands from western points being added to those from the south. Now York markets have rose appreciably in response and speculative sentiment in the stock market has been made much more sensitive to other elements of uncertainty in the outlook. The coal miners strike the unsettied wage schedules in the steel trade and the growing complicity of the dipomatic situation over china have played parts of increasing importance it is recalled that in the experience of last fall the needs of speculative holders of stocks were the last to be consulted by tenders of thosey and many industrial dividend paying stocks were uncompromisingly respected as collateral for loans. The call loan rate on the Stock exchange soared to 186 per cent, while no more than 6 per cent was paid for mans in ordinary business fanesactions. These are the considerations that have induced the week's liquidation.

The bond market has been only slightly
