WHO IS DEAD TRAIN ROBBER

Identity of the Slain Bandit Still Shrouded in Doubt.

SEARCH FOR COMRADE IS FRUITLESS

Officers Unable to Locate Clue to the Whereabouts of the Robber Who Escaped When Baxter Opened Fire.

The dead train robber, shot by Baxter Express Messenger Charles E. Baxter Wednesday night, remains unidentified, although the remains were viewed by hundreds yesterday at Lundquist's undertaking rooms in Council Bluffs. The likeness of the dead man to Al Poorman, a barber who formerly worked in this city and Omaha, led many to believe it was him. The fact that Poorman is walking around in his own proper person very strongly disproves the suggestion that he is the dead man.

He said that unfortunately it could not be decided that men of his race were admitted to committing the crime of which he had been convicted and they deserved the worst punishment possible meted out to them. He was sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years. Smith, Wroth and Razez will be taken to the penitentiary today.
