

TEN BOOKS OF THE CENTURY

A Symposium Compiled by Men Eminent in Literature and Education.

DIVERSE OPINIONS OF LEADING MINDS

An Instructive Review of Books Which Have Most Influenced the Thought and Activities of the Century.

At the request of the editors of the Outlook, New York, to name ten books of the century ending this month which have most influenced the thought and activities of the century...

From James Bryce. It is difficult to name any ten books as having been specially and conspicuously influential in forming or guiding opinion during the century now coming to its end...

1. I like to remember that I bought "The Origin of Species" in the first edition, in London, in 1859. I know that the book ought to be written, and it has rightly achieved its own reputation.

2. Hegel's "Logic" deserves a place, because it dominated all academic departments during the second quarter of the century, and its influence is still potent in England and America.

3. Emerson, so far as preaching goes, is the preacher to the English and American world today. I do not claim for him that he invented the doctrine of the immanent presence of God...

4. Victor Hugo's "The Hunchback of Notre-Dame" is a masterpiece of the novel. It is the best of his work, and it is the best of the century...

5. The value of Alfred Tennyson's book, "In Memoriam," will be stated in different ways by different people. For me, I am very sorry that his son has ever written his father's life...

6. The books chosen in answer to this question must be selected for their results rather than for their merits. They should be the ones which have had the largest measurable effect on the world's thought and civilization.

7. Now, as to Scott and Victor Hugo. It is the fashion just now to talk of Scott as if he were only a scene painter or a stage mechanic. This is sheer nonsense.

8. Goethe's "Faust" is a work that looms up, as I read it year by year, as a monumental landmark.

for the influence it has had on men's thoughts and emotions Hugo's "Les Misérables" would seem to have the strongest claim, though as respects fertility of invention...

From Edward Everett Hale. For English and American readers I think the list of men authors is quite easily made. So far as their names go, I should think that the ten writers who have most affected the thought and living of the last 100 years are Goethe, Walter Scott, Victor Hugo, Ralph Waldo Emerson, De Tocqueville, Darwin, Renan, and, with less certainty, I think I should add John Ruskin, Alfred Tennyson and James Bryce.

To come to special books is more difficult. I probably should mention "Faust" by Goethe, "The Elective Affinities" and "The Morphology" have affected his time more than his other publications, some of which he thought more serious.

3. No one in England would accept De Tocqueville's "Democracy in America" as one of the central books. All the same, I think it is. I think it revealed us to ourselves and I think the study of it has done no end of good in Europe.

4. Bryce's "American Commonwealth" may be classed with this. This however, I will before us. Mr. Bryce himself says some where in it that he has never met any European writer except one Swiss schoolmaster who understood the constitution of the United States.

5. Emerson, so far as preaching goes, is the preacher to the English and American world today. I do not claim for him that he invented the doctrine of the immanent presence of God...

6. The value of Alfred Tennyson's book, "In Memoriam," will be stated in different ways by different people. For me, I am very sorry that his son has ever written his father's life...

Admission to the Bar

OMAHA, Dec. 1.—To the Editor of The Bee: Your editorial in last Sunday's number on "Loopholes in Bar Admission," which very kindly pointed out the commission suggesting much food for thought, is, as I think, in error with reference to the admission of graduates of the law school of the State university.

Of course if that institution is being made the means of admitting to the bar, it is not only a matter of public policy, but also a matter of public safety. The first of these two classes of students, who are the examination of the commission appointed by the supreme court, and the difficulty might as to the second-class well be obviated by requiring them to also be examined by the commission, as has been suggested by you.

A change is needed in the statutory provision, whereby parties who are practitioners in other states may on their removal to this state be admitted to practice in our courts without an examination into their knowledge of the principles of the common law.

But in the case of the university, its teachers are well known to the state, men of established learning and character, who are within the jurisdiction of the supreme court and amenable to its disciplinary powers if it be ascertained that they are abusing the privilege granted them.

1. I should place first Darwin's "Origin of Species," which in a way implied his later "Descent of Man," because the whole evolutionary movement took its rise from those two books more than from any others.

2. Hegel's "Logic" deserves a place, because it dominated all academic departments during the second quarter of the century, and its influence is still potent in England and America.

3. Emerson, so far as preaching goes, is the preacher to the English and American world today. I do not claim for him that he invented the doctrine of the immanent presence of God...

If the man does not stop the cough the cough stops the man; stops his appetite, his sleep, his pleasure and his work. So called "cough remedies" sometimes relieve, but do not give help enough to cure. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures coughs and diseases of the respiratory organs perfectly and permanently. It stops the cough, it heals the inflamed membrane, it purifies the blood and increasing the action of the blood-making glands enriches every organ with the good blood which alone will make a good body.

My husband had been coughing for years and finally found me that he would go on an excursion to write Mrs. John Sherman of No. 265 23th Place, Chicago, Ill. He had such terrible coughing spells, we almost gave up, but he was so determined to get well enough to cure. Dr. Pierce
