The money which Polk county was going to lend to the country banks at 4 per cent interest has not been taken by the banks that applied for leans and put up the required bonds. There was $400,000 of the fund borrowed to build a court house, but which will not be used for a year or more. The banks are going to give time certificates-six months or a year-but the courts have decided that the money can only be loaned on demand certificates, hence many of the banks failed to call for the cash at the appointed time. KILLED BY A DEAD MAN. Boer Soldier's Experience or

Boer Soldier's Experience on Bloody Spion Kop.

So our dead lay, and grinned at those other dead, and the fierce sun dried flesh and blood on Briton and on Boer, for both remained unburied for a while reports a correspondent of the London News. And so it came to pass that a Boer commando retook the lines where those who died for us were lying, and as they marched among our dead they saw a sergeant lying at full length, shot through the brain, yet even in death the man looked like some fighting machine suddenly gone out of order. His rifle was pressed against his shoulder, his left hand grasped the barrel on the under side, the foreingers of the right hand pressed the trigger lightly, the barrel rested out upon a rock, and his death-dulled eye still glared along the sights, for dissolution had come to him just as he bent his head to fire at those who shot him, and now his hands had stiffened in the unbendable stiffness of eternal sleep. A Boer soldier saw the sergeant as he lay, and with rude hands grasped the rifle by the barrel and tried to jerk it from the dead man's grip, but as he pulled he brought the rifle in line with his own breast and the unyielding finger on the trigger did the rest, the rifle spoke from the dead man's hand, and the builet passing through the Boer's heart laid him beside the Briton.

Sounds like a journalistic ile, does it not? Read it in a novel and yeu would laugh, would you not? But it is the eternal truth, all the same, for the comrade of the Boer who died that day, killed by a dead man, told me the tale himself, and he was one of those who planted the dead Dutchman on the slope of Spion Kop.

Labor in Hawati.

A Honolulu correspondent of the Boston Transcript writes: "The majority of the Chinese are laborers or traders on a small scale. For faithful service, commend to me a Chinaman. In our establishment we can do with no less than three. Ah Quae, the cook; Ah Loon, the yardman, and Sing Wo, the laundryman, are at their posts as surely as the sun climbs over the eastern mountains. Most of the Chinese came here first as contract laborers on the sugar plantations. The development of the country called for labor such as they could give, and much of the material prosperity of this land is due to their patient and faithful service. The unstable native cannot be depended on for the constant grind of toll, and foreign labor must needs be imported. When the contracts expired the Chinese laborers left the plantation for better paying positions. Many entered domestic service, some became gardeners on their own account, and many more engaged in mercantile business. It goes without saying Labor in Hawatt.
