South Omaha News.

Suggestions for the proposed new city charter are coming in thick and fast to the various committees working on the document.

NO TRACE HAS BEEN FOUND OF RAY BURUM

The young Colorado Miner Starts for Home of His Wisconsin Bride, but Vanishes Near Omaha, Leaving No Clue Behind.

What has become of Ray Burum, bridegroom in prospect?

His buckskin wallet, heavy with gold, and his spirits light with pleasant anticipations, this young man left his home at Victor, Colo., October 25, destined for Lantana, Wis., where he was to wed Miss Nellie Jones, the sweetheart of his childhood.

Accompanying the gruesome package was a badly-spelled and ill-constructed letter, written by a personage who has played a most mysterious part in this case from the first. He stands outside the trouble, says he was a witness of the shooting affair near Omaha.

One theory advanced by the sleuths, which upon its face seems tenable, is that young Burum, tiring of his matrimonial bargain, hit upon the expedient of a "fake" shooting affair by accident or design. According to this conjecture, Burum has seen fit to drop quietly out of his accustomed groove of life.

Courts and the Mystery.

Then the anxious vigil of the bride-elect in the Wisconsin town was interrupted by the receipt of this remarkable note, bearing the Omaha postmark, and dated November 2:

Miss Nellie Jones—That you man you are looking for wont be there for some time.

He met with an accident that he will not recover in ten days. He was not to blame for this predicament. I will only say that he shot through the left side and I am going to let him stay away when he has recovered he will explain for himself. Very truly, DR.

was fond of the games, but never associated with immoral people.

"He was very observing and a great investigator—would face danger to inquire into anything mysterious—could read human nature well, a very witty writer and quick to catch a joke; had a hearty salute for children, of whom he was very fond; was liberal-hearted with personal friends, but quiet and distant among strangers.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Orpheum—

It would be difficult to arrange a bill of livelier sketches than those which are to be seen at the Orpheum this week. The list has the merit of being longer than usual and brimful of new things.

Jack Norworth is the same old "Jail Bird Coon" who has furnished abundant amusement on the circuit before, but his jokes and songs are freshly culled.

"The King of C."

This was a sort of sequel to the piece that brought the pair fame during the few seasons just past, and while there was less motive than that characterizing its predecessors, there was a surplus of farce that made its success instantaneous.

"Shore Acres" at Boyd's—

The enthusiasm of the large crowds which greeted "Shore Acres" at Boyd's yesterday afternoon and evening attested that Herne's rural drama has lost none of its charms for the theater-going public.

Letter Depress Mystery.

This is the entire information vouchsafed the family and friends of the young man as to his fate and even this is so palpably untrue as to serve only to complicate the mystery.

Mr. Burum has this to say of her lost son, in a letter to the Omaha Crew of police:

"Shortly before leaving he was warned by a friend against visiting questionable resorts or talking with strangers and he answered, very emphatically: 'I'll make a confidant of no one.' He also said he'd not stand a holdup, that he would fight for his money, and that no one could take it from him unless he took it from his dead body. I never knew of Ray's having any trouble, or of his having a fight with anyone. He was a good billiard and pool player and he worthy of comparison with the Uncle Nat which advanced Herne to a high place in the world of actors.

As Martin Berry, Atkins Lawrence, entirely satisfactory, Marion Cullen was a very pretty Helen Berry and Belle Theodore's Ann Berry could not have been improved. The unimportant part of Perley, Mrs. Berry's hired girl, was entrusted to Sadie Cullen, a pretty young woman who is worthy of a more pretentious role.

"Mince's Trocadero"

Mince's Trocadero was crowded at both performances yesterday and a hearty welcome that betokens a good week's business was given to Sam Serber's "Gay Morning Glories."

The Blue Bird of Broadway on the Beach which opens the performance, is a pleasing mixture of song and dance with a stately action that does not fall to please the blasé clientele of the Trocadero.

Jack Norworth is the same old "Jail Bird Coon" who has furnished abundant amusement on the circuit before, but his jokes and songs are freshly culled.
