NOTABLE EVENTS OF THE YEAR

Ohronological Review of the Lights and Shadows of 1900.

HOLDS CENTER OF THE STAGE

Eminent People Who Passed to the Great Beyond-Tragedies, Disasters, Political and General Events.

Among the many notable events worthy of a place in the history of the year war holds the foremost place. Rebellion, conquest and revenge have called into action the military arm of more governments than in any year for a generation, and is a strik ing parallel for the disturbed condition of mir or character. In South Africa the war publics taxed the former's resources. Twopressing the native insurrection. War in South Africa. The war between Great Britain and the Bouth African republics, which began October 15, 1899, opened the year with the republican army in triumph on the northern borders of Cape Colony. February 12 Lord Roberts put his army in motion. On the 13th Rensburg was taken, and two days later the siege of Kimberley was raised. General Cronje and his army of 4,000 men fled eastward, but was cornered and forced to surrender at Paardeberg on the 27th. From that date the British encountered little opposition. The siege of Ladysmith was raised on the 28th, but the relief of Mafeking was delayed until May 16. General Joubert, commander of the Boer forces, died March 27, and his chief of staff, Colonel Villebois-Mareuil, French military expert, was killed April 5. Lord Roberts entered further delay, the Chinese fleeing before Bloemfontein, capital of the Orange Free them. Early in December the Boers, after a series of brilliant actions, in which they were successful, broke through the British cordon and entered Cape Colony, where they expected large accessions to their ranks from the disaffected Dutch. Lord Roberts sailed for England December 2, leaving General Kitchener in command. The mission of the Boer envoys to the United States in June, and that of President Kruger to Europe in November and December, were fruitless. None of the governments approached would intercede or intervene in behalf of the struggling republics. In the Philippines.

The third blot on the war map of the year is the so-called Boxer uprising in China, instigated by fanatic opposition to foreigners. Early in June the rebellion developed near Pekin. The railroad south ments and all foreigners in the city began. Urgent appeals of the legations to their governments for help resulted in a concerted movement for relief. Marines from the men-of-war in Chinese waters, 2,000 strong, under command of Admiral Seymour, were defeated at Tlen Tsin and retreated to Taku, the Chinese port captured by the allies June 18. The allied army attacked Tien Tsin July 3 and captured it on the 13th. In one of the actions Colonet Emerson H. Liscum, Ninth United States infantry, and Captain Austin R. Davis, United States marines, were killed. August 2 the allies, 16,000 strong, started for Pekin. A severe battle was fought at Peitsang, eight miles from Tien Tsin, in which the loss of the allies was 1,200.
