Sues Insurance Company. The last move in the insurance quarrel over a fee for examination of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life association is by Max Beehler, the head of the insurance department, and Auditor of State Merriam. It is a suit for $489.78 on the part of Beehler for the fees claimed. The notice was served on Auditor Merriam, who has for-mally accepted service for and in behalf of the insurance company, claiming that under the power of attorney filed in his office he has a right to do this. He has refused to permit the company to withdraw from doing business in the state, although it has no agents or representatives The retiring attorney general, Milhere. ton A. Remley, has been employed as attorney for Beehler and Merriam and the case was brought in the district court of Polk county.

Complete the Capitol.

The commission appointed in accordance with a resolution of the last legislature to inspect the state capitol and report on what is necessary to complete it made a preliminary survey of the building and will begin at once the work of estimating the cost of the finishing. The commission will recommend that the building be finished as it was planned and that everything put into it be of the very best. The capitol was built on that principle. Everything about it is the finest and best. It is of stone and steel and the stone is from every part of the world. When the capitol was commenced the first commission put in a foundation of cheap stone and expended $51,000 before it was discovered that the work was being slighted and that a building constructed in that way would not stand. The legislature sumarily dismissed the commission and appointed another, which took out all of the stone put in before and made a new start. This commission built the capitol at a cost of a little less than $3,000,000 and the accounts came within $1.80 of balancing at the end. Peter A. Day of Iowa City, one of the engineers who laid out the Union Pacific railroad, was actively in charge of the work during all the time of the construction and he has been appointed at the head of the commission to report on finishing the work. With him is H. A. Josselyn, an architect, and C. A. Cumming, an artist. 1121 The main corridors were never frescoed. 03 inch the basement story was not finished at all. .30.24 inches in many places wood was substituted for 23 inch stone, the sidewalks were laid of cheap stone, which is already crumbling, and much of the furnishing was left undone. The cost of completing the building in accordance with the original design is variously estimated at from $100,000 to double that amount, and even more could be spent on the building to good advantage.
