Hotel Quarantine Raised.

The quarantine of the lowa house, the hotel in which a chambermaid was discovered ill with smallpox, has been raised and the hotel is open again. The patient was promptly removed to a place of refuge, the rooms were fumigated, all the bedding treated for destruction of germs, all the persons in the house were vaccinated unless they had been vaccinated recently, and everything has been done that is possible to make the hotel safe. At best it has proved a costly experience for the hotel, but the local health officials give assurance that there will be no danger from the hotel. No new cases have developed in the city since,

Arrangements are being made for the are of the afflicted persons. The reports from the state continue to come to the state board with regularity, indicating that the epidemic is in for an all-winter run in almost every quarter of the state. Two persons who broke away from the quarantine at the Iowa house are in trouble in consequence. They are George Mooser manager of the company playing at the Auditorium, and Stage Manager Waltz. They both escaped before the quarantine was raised. Waitz was arrested about midnight last night after the play had been finished at the Auditorium and he is now in jail. Mooser took a train east and was arrested and locked up in Davenport. They will be prosecuted for ignoring quarantine
