like humanitarians in their efforts to bring her back to her senses. They had taken her to the brook to obtain water. They would have taken her home after she was dead, but when they reached the neighborhood they saw persons about.

Frightened at the Dead Girl.

They were frightened at "the dead girl' and did not want to get mixed up in the scandal. They maintained that they had no evil intentions against the girl. The meeting in the saloon was unintentional so far as McAllister was concerned and he had drawn his friend, Kerr, into the case unwittingly. Campbell became mixed up in it because Death did not want to be seen on the street with the girl lest some one tell his wife. The hack, it would ap pear from the statements made by the prisoners, was not intended for the party at first, but for McAllister, Kerr and two young women, whose names McAllister refused to divulge, on the ground that their names had not been mentioned before and he did not want to cause them annoyance. The stop intended at Lee's was not connected with the girl they had with them. but because, although she had had enough to drink, the men had further capacity. The story as told by each appeared plausible, explanatory and reasonable, but conflicted with the testimony of the hackman and the alleged confessions of Death and Campbell, as introduced by the state and admitted as evidence. The state, which Allister's. was beaten yesterday in the effort to introduce these onfession said to have been

The case for the defense was then closed. Prosecutor Emly got Campbell to deny specifically each item in the alleged confession said to have been made by him on the night of his arrest. This alleged con fession was ruled out yesterday. Detectives Titus, Lord and Taylor were recalled and each went over the same ground. Where Campbell had denied they affirmed and where he affirmed they denied. The testimony of the detectives closed the rebuttal and the taking of testimony. The jury have the facts as claimed by both sides to exist.
