THE OMAHA DAILY BEE: THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1901.

Of Royal Lineage.

ruled Norway, Sweden, Denmark and England as well. I know my lineage and the Craddock made no reply. There was nothing that he could say. The great, giant-like combination of Hercules and Apollo was as immovable as a rock in moods like this one, and so, picking their way down the mountain side, they presently discovered the path to which Crad-

The Norwegian raised the bronze knocker to summon the porter, but paused ere he permitted it to fall, and then, while he stood with it in his grasp, above the moaning thunder, which trembled in the distance, his voice rang out in that strange.

weird vodel, and he knew that at least one person within the lodge would recognize and understand it. Then, while the sounds of it still lingered among the tree-

The delay which followed was short

"Two gentlemen who have lost their way

on the mountain in the storm," announced

Thorgensen, in German. "Open, my good man, and permit us to enter. We are

There was something in the Norwegian' tone which reassured the porter, and he hastened to comply. Another man took their horses and led them away in the darkness, and the travelers were speedily shown into the warm and dry quarters adjoining the gate. They were given a warm beer seasoned with pepper was set before it was evident that Thorgensen had pro

them.

were before the gate of the lodge

Denmark.

the dog barked.

princess to speak.

(Copyright, 1990, by S. S. McClure Co.) | man being lives. It is our passport for ad-The storm, which had been raging since mission to the lodge. In the sunlight, even 4 o'clock that afternoon, increased in vio-ierce when the sun went down and the be turned away. Tonight we will be weltwo men who had been struggling through come. One thing more: Just now you rethe German forest since noon feared that ferred to me as a peasant. I am no peasant. they were doomed to pass the night among The same blood which flows in her veins those gigantic trees with the thunder burns in mine. The ancestors of her father, crashing and booming over them, and the the king, were the same as the ancestors vivid and almost incessant lightning dart- of my father, who was a sailor and a fishering and hissing through the branches. For hours they had led their horses, because the way was too precarious for any other was the first king of the Northmen, and he mode of procedure. They were in the midst of a dense forest, which they had attempted to cross without the aid of a record is as clear, as direct and as imposguide; and now darkness was upon themdarkness which they could not hope to again in the presence of the princess I will penetrate.

One of them was tall and broad, almost a giant in stature, with tawny hair and beard and (in spite of their surroundings) an easy, nonchalant air of conscious superiority to circumstances. The other was shorter and more compactly built, with swarthy face and dark eyes, alert, quickmotioned and cautious, but not less courageous than his companion

"Tell you what, Craddock," said the taller of the two, when they paused to coldock had referred, and in another half hour lect their faculties and decide upon what was best to do, "I don't think I fancy what is paradoxically called dry land in a storm like this. Give me the sea, the open sea, even if I have nothing greater nor better than a common yawl beneath me. It beats these big trees and failing branches with never a compass to steer by nor a point in sight from which to take your bearings. What are we going to do now ?"

"Forge ahead; it is the only thing we can do," replied Craddock.

tops, he hammered with the bronze upon "Call up the sun, then, Mr. Joshua, for the gate. it seems to be standing still on the wrong side of the world. Call it up out of the Then the smaller gate, which was encased depths, take an observation and I'm with within the big one, was opened cautiously. you. As for keeping our course-or any just sufficiently far to permit the appearcourse in this blackness-it scems to me ance of a bearded face at the aperture. to be out of the question."

"We cannot remain here, however."

The Norwegian laughed aloud. 'It looks to me as though we would have to do that very thing," he said. "Why, drenched and half famished." Crad, we're surrounded by breakers, and they are the worst sort of breakers that I ever ran afoul of. They're made of wood. to be sure, but they are as likely to make a wreck of our spars as they are of the hull. If one of those falling twigs-and I'll take my oath they're higger round than my legs-if one of them should rap you on the head, it would be worse than falling from the maintruck of a fullrigged ship to the deck.

The darkness was intense by this time. vided himself for this emergency, for, havalthough never a minute passed when it was ing questioned the porter concerning the not dispelled, for an instant at least, by name of his master, he gave him, instead the lightning. One of the flashes illuminated of a card, a letter to deliver. Whatever it the scene as Thorgensen ceased speakcontained-and even Craddock had been, ing and, without replying to the protest or until that moment, unaware of its existthe Norwegian, Craddock started forward. ence-it was potent, for they were presently Thus, for another hour, they progressed, escorted to the lodge, where they were pausing between the flashes and making, made welcome with thorough German hosas Thorgensen expressed it, "as much headpitality. Their saddlebags were brought to way as possible," whenever the warring them, so that by the time their host sent elements permitted objects for a moment to be visible. nearly all the evidences of the night jour-

The Norwegian never abated his flow or ney through the forest and the storm had conversation and did not appear to heed the been removed. fact that his companion repiled in monosyl-When they entered the library, which had lables whenever he could do so. Their route led them over obstructions of all arsenal than a place for reading and study. they found themselves in the presence of a listen to you am promised to another." kinds, around huge bowlders and often u-derneath the fallen trunk of a forest giant man whose stature was almost as great as whose companions had not permitted it to lie prone upon the ground, but with out- he was the typical German lord, who gov- calmiy. "My lineage is as old as yoursstretched arms sustained it so that it only erns principalities with almost feudal older and greater than that of the royal diggers. rights; who prefers the vasiness of his personage who has promised to restorehalf reclined.

began to descend the sloping side of the the most brilliant court of Europe and who and privileges and the name which are teresting individual than the "clammer." mountain and their way became easter. The or reservation. The ladies they did not cu- but she started to her feet and drew back counter until evening, and then the princess from him. was not present. Craddock watched Thor "No," she said, sadly, but with irrevocanarrowly, but he could not discover one sign ble firmness, and answering his unspoken of impatience or doubt. The face of the thought. "Do not defile this holy moment Norwegian was as placid and as full of con- with a caress. Go as you came, with dignity and honor. Leave me as you found fidence as it ever had been. On the morning of the second day, when me, undefiled. Our love is great; let us the hunting party left the lodge, Thor was be as great as that love. Within the week not among those who comprised it. Crad- you will be in Stockholm. Before two weeks dock, however, made his excuses, for he have passed I will be in my father's palnoticed that the princess was also absent, ace. At that time send his majesty's em-Thor had said nothing to him of his deter- israry. Let the good God who implanted mination to absent himself from the hunt this love in our hearts decide our fates. that day, but the American could be ready- Go before my strength fails-before yours tongued when occasion required and he in- overmasters you. Royal, yonder stands vented a satisfactory excuse; so the party your master; go with him." and she stooped man, and I know it to be true. We are both descendants of Harold Fairhair, who went on its way, and the only guests who and kissed the dog's great head.

were left behind were Thor, the Norwegian. Thor, trembling as he had never done and Carlotta-or Charlotte-a princess of before, even in moments of direst peril, dropped upon one knee and bowed his

An hour after the departure of the merry head. The princess went nearer to him hunters the tall figure of Thor appeared and for an instant rested one hand upon sible of controversion as hers. When I am mong the tamaracks and spruces near the his tawny hair; then she turned and traced house, and presently from their depths came her way to the ledge, and the Norwegian ot be eilent. Tonight I feel that I am a king. Yonder, where that light gleams out, the weird yodel cry which once heard from did not rise until he knew that she had beckoning to me, is my queen and no man, the throat of a Norwegian would never be passed out of his view. be he emperor or god, shall say me nay."

forgotten. A dog-a Great Dane-heard it and barked. Then he approached the grove, That evening, an hour after the deparsniffing suspiciously along the path; but a ture of Thor and Craddock a tired courier calm, strong voice spoke to him as he passed arrived at the hunting lodge of the Ger-under the boughs and presently he stood man prince, where the princess was a wagging his tail and licking the hand of the guest. He came from the king of Denmark and the letter that he delivered bore man who had alarmed him.

A half hour later the cry once more the royal seal. It announced the death in echoed through the ground and among the the hunting field of Prince Charles of Rouevergreen branches of the trees. The Great mania and directed that Charlotte should Dane locked up at his companion and at once return to Copenhagen to enter upon whined. He seemed to know that the man a period of mourning with proper respect was calling for somebody who would not for her betrothed husband. ome. He trotted out of the grove towards

One year after the interview beneath the the house and barked, than he returned to the man and licked his hand again. When tamaracks and spruces Thor and Charlotte another half-hour had passed the yodet met again, but this time the interview was counded for the third time and then, imm -- held in the great reception room of the diately afterwards, a fourth time, and again palace of the Danish king. Then their interview had no auditors, now they were surrounded by nobles, dignitaries and am Ten minutes later the figure of a woman bassadors from every court in Europe, for appeared in the path approaching the grove it was the occasion of the formal beand Thor, observing it, clasped his hands trothal of the Princess Charlotte of Dentogether and moved his lips silently. Then mark to Thor of Norway, now a prince. a smile glowed in his eyes and he waited

Two persons who truly love are ever in without moving for her to come to him. In ventors of opportunity and so it was that another moment they were face to face before the hour came for the departure of under the tamaracks and as the princess Thor from the palace he found himself for raised her eyes to Thor's a shaft of sunmoment alone with the princess. They light stole down through the branches and were concealed from the throng of courtiers rested with caressing touch upon her uponly by the heavy curtains which shrouded turned face. It was as though a halo had the window in which they stood and their fallen upon her. Beside them the Great time was limited to a moment, but a Dane, seated upon his haunches, looked on, thousand years would not have been too and Thor dropped his right hand until It much to have lived for that one supreme rested on the dog's head and waited for the He reached out his arms and moment. she glided within their embrace. He bent "Was this necessary?" murmured the his head downward and she raised her face place near the fire and a pitcher of mulled princess at last, when the silence seemed to his. Their lips met. They remained filled with the sounds of unspoken worces, thus for a moment, silently, and then Does it not add to your suffering and to gliding from his embrace, she returned to mine? Is it generous of you, who love me, her guests, but there was a new light in to demand this sacrifice of my pride and of her eyes and a new joy in her heart. Her my womanhood? Speak. When we last saw words to Thor, spoken under the tameach other you were silent, because I de- aracks and spruces, had been prophetic manded it, and I have felt that I was us- The good God who had implanted this love just. You, who dared so much to see me, in their hearts had decided their fates. should at least have been permitted to word that he was ready to receive them. love the holy thing it is now I rely. Speak, Clam Diggers Bring All Sorts of Articles to the Surface.

(The End.) TO PREVENT THE GRIP

Laxative Bromo-Quinine removes the cause QUEER THINGS FROM THE SEA.

More than half the clams sold in the mensage to me and-go. But, in saying what you have to say, remember who I am. markets of this city, says the New York Remember what I am and remember that Mail and Express, come from the lower more of the appearance of a sportsman's if you were of royal birth and I more lowly and Sandy Hook bays. Except when freezthe conditions would be the same. I who ing weather prevails, hundreds of boats daily drag their big rakes along their bot-"It is to tell you that I am of royal tom and it is safe to say that there is Thor's. Past middle age, rugged and big, birth that I am here, princess," he said, hardly a square foot of this sandy area which has not been furrowed by the clam

Among the inhabitants of the north After journeying some distance they forests and the solitude of his mountains to who has already restored to me-the rights shore of New Jersey there is no more in-

King Solomon Had A Great Reputation for Wisdom

One of his wise remarks was "Of making many books there is no end." He had never seen the making of a great dictionary. It is like the making of many books and seems to have no end. In making the

Standard Dictionary

an army of the brainiest and smartest men of the world was employed and a million dollars spent. Take the BEST PRODUCT OF THE BEST BRAINS and the result must be satisfactory. But with all this expenditure of man and mind and money

The Standard Dictionary is Offered for trees were separated by greater distance and the clutter of debris and moss-grows rocks were less frequent and smaller. The wind howled on, the thunder continued to boom and the lightning still played hide and seek among the branches, but the darkness seemed loss dense. There were my ments when they could see the sky through the treetops.

Once, when they halted to rest and were about to start on again, the horse led by Craddock, who was in the lead, refused to stir, and while his master was still urging him a flash of light revealed the fact that they were standing on the edge of a ravine, into which five paces more would have precipitated them; and then out of the darkness beneath, far away and far below them, the quick eyes of the Norwegian discovered a single glimmer of light.

"Look there, Crad," he said, grasping his companion by the arm. "Do you see that? Looks like a masthead light. Anyhow, it's a beacon for us. We'll have to change our course, but we can make it, ch? Looks as though we would have to come about and try a new tack, though How do you make out the bearings, old man ?"

"I think we are on a ledge which we can go around without much trouble. Hold my horse till I take soundings."

He disappeared in the darkness and was gone so long that Thorgensen began to stamp with impatience and at last he calls

"Where the devil are you, Crad? Down in that black hole?"

"No, right here," replied Craddock, at his elbow. "Come: I know the way now. There is a path just below us and I think not deceived me concerning the purpose of a peasant for a princess. "Yes, Crad, it is the same old madness, and as sure as I stand here in the midst of storm and darkness, with my eyes fixed an American. We are traveling companupon that glimmer of light, I believe that lions. I happened, your highness, to menthe power of love has directed my steps tion to your cousine in Stockholm that i hand of God is in this! I know that she had lost our way utterly and it was only I believe that she knows that I am somewhere near her."

"Does she expect you. Ralph ?"

"No; not in the sense that you mean. I have never communicated with her nor attempted to do so since that night in the Mediterranean. I have not intended to deceive you in inducing you to come here with me. I knew that you understood why I came and why I wished to have you with me. Do you know, Crad, that one month from today is the time fixed for her wedding ?

"Yes.'

"Do you remember that although I saw her and listened to her voice that evening in the Mediterranean, although I touched her hand and kissed it. I uttered not one word myself?"

'Yes; 1 remember.'

The Norwegian threw back his head with a gesture that was majestic and the flash of lightning which illumined his face at that instant revealed something that was grand and inspiring about the arpect and attitude Norwegian had replied: of the man. Presently, he continued:

"I discovered that she was with a hunt-"It belongs to one of the German princes, suffice."

I will not tell you his name. You will soon know in whose domain you are. Yonder oughly cordial. In the honesty of his own majorty of Norway and Sweden, or to his speak. I will hear you now, even though 1 fear my own powers of resistance; but 1

know that you love me, and I feel no sense of shame in the knowledge that I love yow.

On your strength as a man to preserve that then, and I will hear you. Deliver your

"LET THE GOD WHO HAS IMPLANTED THIS LOVE IN OUR HEARTS DECIDE OUR FATE."

It leads to the house where the light shines can be induced to leave it only by the mine by right of birth, and who has said His yarns, while not "fishy," are decidedly wegian. "This gentleman is Mr. Craddock will add to the request her own prayers the bay. hospitality."

Stockholm ?"

"You are welcome, gentlemen; twice man, but suddenly, and without warning. welcome, since you come from my friend she sank upon one knee, wound her arms and cousin. Your baggage, I suppose, is not around the neck of the animal and wept. far away. In the morning I will be glad to Thor neither moved nor spoke. He supply your needs. And now, if you will waited; and presently, when the paroxysm join me at the table-there are several was past, the princess, from her recumbent gentlemen present; the ladies have retired-I will see that one want-for you position and still retaining her hold upon the dog as if she were afraid to remove must be very hungry-is supplied without delay. Do not mind your appearance, I her arms lest they should act without her beg. During the hunting season we put sanction and outstretch themselves toward the man who stood so patiently before her, aside all unnecessary observances of dress.

raised her eyes in which tears still glis-. tened and looked upon the face of Thor. The following morning was glad with When she spoke it was in a low, tremulous brilliant sunshine and the foliage glistened voice.

as though it were bejeweled. Craddock had "I believe you," she said. "Go, then, as though it were beleweied. Uraddocs and and request his majesty to intercede with oil stove and them laaterns I got from reception at the lodge and that with some my father. I know to whom you refer. iteraness. He had demanded to know if Our host here has told me of the letter the letter which had secured them such a you brought from Stockholm. If the cordial welcome was authentic and the writer of that letter and his august father will do as you have said, it is true that "The letter is genuine. It was written by I they may not plead in vain. Go, my bea crown prince and was his own sugges- loved, and be sure that my prayers and ing party at a lodge in the forest," he said tion, not mine. For the present let that hopes go with you. Take with you this Great Dane. He is rightly named Royal.

Their host was bluff, hearty and thor- Take him, as a present from me, to his

cut. Before we start, though, Ralph, I peremptory summons of his master, the that he will intercede with your august "clammy," have enough spice of the sea want to ask a few questions. You have emperor. "You are welcome, gentlemen," he said, your consent to that intercession that I But his stories of marvelous catches, midof your trip to this part of the world. I advancing with extended hand, and greet-knew, when you asked me to come here ing first one and then the other. He spoke fore you are to be given to another and ket with articles full and rough experwith you, why you made the request. It in his own language. "May I ask which of much may be accomplished in that time. lences off a lee shore lose much of their ts the same old madness. Ralph-the love you was the bearer of this letter from My friends will not ask in vain for the hand interest when he begins to tell of the of Princess Charlotte, the favorite daugh- countless number of things besides clams ter of Denmark's king, if that daughter he has raked up from the sandy bottom of

The most valuable catch ever made by He paused and the princess did not reply. one of these men was a canvas belt, containing 500 sovereigns, which a Keyport She stood with clasped hands and downthrough this black forest and that beyond intended to travel this way and he begged cast eyes. She breathed rapidly while her clammer brought to the surface with a that light she is awaiting my coming. Say me to call upon you, but I did not think face flushed, became pale and then flushed rakeful of clams in the main ship channel what you will, believe what you will, the to appear in the night and in a storm. We again; and the great Dane withdrew his two years ago. Closely following this an massive head from beneath the hand of old sword, crumbling in its scabbard, was is there where that light gleams out. And after your porter had admitted us that 1 Thor and, going to her, thrust his nose brought to light and still later a stiletto discovered at whose home I had claimed beneath her palms and held it there. She of wonderful beauty and design was added did not at once perceive the dog, which to the scanty adornment of the modest seemed to be pleading the cause of the little home of another clammer.

Two 500-pound anchors, each at the end of thirty fathoms of chain, were the result of a haul made by a clammer dredg ing just inside the point of Sandy Hook a month ago. He sold them at Fulton market the next day for $60.

An old, grizzly, weather-beaten veteran of the clamming fleet was asked the other day if he had ever "raked up" anything which he could use in his home or on his

"Nawthin' much." he said, "I jist took from the bay this past summer enough marked coal to keep me and me woman warm

"I don't know whether them clams be this winter half through. And every one of them dishes, pans, pots and kettles do not know how to celebrate."

Of course much which is raked up from Davy Jones' locker." the clammer because it is found in all stages Hammers, monkey-wrenches and cables, of decay. But often the men are fortunate caught in the clothing of some unfortunate oll-skin suits, old trousers and women's enough "to hook on to something" soon man or woman and brought the body once dresses were among the other articles which after it has gone to the bottom.

this old bayman had seen daily brought to the surface in the clutches of the clam wire cable, whoch was lost overhoard from and relatives only after the clam rake has rake.

succulent bivalve their richest harvest, years ago brought to a clammer who re numerically, is one of beer bottles. On covered and sold it enough money to pay the fishing flats, off the point of Sandy Hook, for extensive and much needed repairs on Rhow in whose domain you are Yorder almost at our feet, is the lodge where she is a guest, and I shall see and have speech with her before I depart. On such a sight as this, from the storm and darkness, surch any traveler will be welcome where a hu-

Only $7.00

There are so many points of superiority in The Standard Dictionary, aside from its marvelously low price, that one can scarcely enumerate them. Some one has said there are in THE STANDARD 41 dictionaries in one. Each topic is the work of a specialist.

Satisfactory to students and scholars because so complete, containing 300,000 words, nearly three times as many as the old stand-by, Webster's Dictionary. The book stands in high favor among the wise men on both sides of the Atlantic, and that fact alone establishes its success. Here are some opinions from the press of Europe:

The Freeman's Journal , Dublin, Ireland: "For scholarly accuracy and exceptional fulness . . . it stands unrivalled. . . . Of other existing dictionaries with which we are acquainted, we know of none that can be compared with the Standard." The Belfast Age, Belfast, Ireland: . it were difficult to praise this splendid dictionary too highly. It is work for which all who speak the English language may be justly grate-

The Irish Times, Dublin, Ireland: "... It will be recognized, we have every reason to say, not alone throughout the \merican continent. but in all English-speaking parts of the Old World, also as an authority from its fulness, discrimination, variety and ample erudition. It is a monument of American learning and industry. . . From " publication of the Standard Dictic. .y America may date a new period of the country's his-

The Liverpool Daily Post, Liverpool: "It is an implement that will be of wast service to those who cultivate the literary arts on either side of the Atlantic. It is a monument to American industry, no less than the great White City by Lake Michigan (the late Chicago World's Fair.)"

THE STANDARD DICTIONARY has a great many attractive features. It is not feasible to enumerate all at this time. For instance, so many words are in constant dispute. Such words have been referred to 50 leading philologists and their opinions atken as final.

The matter of spelling is also difficult to adjust. In the Standard that has been settled conservatively, yet accurately.

The quotations are gems, illustrating to a nicety the use of the words.

The illustrations are numerous, in fact it is a work that will be attractive to children on this account and consequently all the more valuable as an educator.

No home library where sation, accuracy and completeness. Its mechanical execution is a delight to the artisthere are school children tic sense." should be without the Standard Dictionary.

President Bashford of Ohio Weslyan: "After a comparison of many words I am quite convinced that the Standard surpasses the Century Dictionary in careful and accurate College men generally agree as to the excellence of the work. Here are some expressions concerning the work by college professors:

definition of words and in its illustrations, as well as the number of words defined. Later: "I say more emphatically than ever before that it is the best dictionary in the English language, and I want it for constant reference." Prof. Duffield of Princeton: "It will be conspicuous among the enduring monuments of intellectual life at the close of the 19th century. . . For comprehensiveness Prof. R. A. Todd, Columbia: "I am exceedingly pleased with its fulness, conden-of vocabulary, accuracy in definition, judicious arrangement of material, instructive ii lustration and admirable typography, it is superior to any other work of it class, and ere long will supersede them and be recognized as The Standard Dictionary."

For $7.00. Examine the Book. Megeath Stationery Co. 1309 Farnam Street.

Petrified clams and wood, old flint tom-ahawks and crustaceans of all sorts, locked democrats or republicans, but they criminly together in most fantastic shapes, are some of the other curiosities now and then the bottom of the bay is of little use to rake helps the sea give up its dead. Scores and scores of times have its sharp teeth more to the light of day. The bodies of Five hundred pounds of the hest steel many persons have been restored to friends Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock when the rudely disturbed their slumbers at the bot-But all clammers agree that next to the yacht was anchored in the Horseshoe two tom of the bay.

Boston About Ready for Service.

close up against five empty beer bottles. The boatman looked puzzled for a moment, as he surveyed his catch, and then re-marked. Hereified clams and wood, old flint tom-late to be done on it. Hereified clams and wood, old flint tom-late to be done on it. Hereified clams and wood, old flint tom-late to be done on it. Hereified clams and wood, old flint tom-hereified clams and wood, old flint tom-

A Cure for Lumbago.

Sufferers from lumbago or rheumatism in brought to the surface. Often the clam relief may be had by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Mr. W. C. Williamson of Amherst, Va., says: "For more than a year I suffered with lumbago. I finally tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me entire relief, which all other remedies had failed to do." For sale by all druggists.

Vigilancia's Passengers Safe.

HAVANA, Jan. 16 - The passengers of the Ward line steamer Vigilancia, which went ashare Monday morning on the reets of