Venezuela Gunboat Has Rough Passage from New York to San Juan.

ARRIVES IN PORT BURNING BARRELED PORK

Week Will Be Required to Put Vessel in Shipshape, Which Was Formerly George Gould's Atalanta.

SAN JUAN, P. R., Jan. 31.-The Venezuelan gunboat Restaurador, formerly the Atalanta, George Gould's yacht, which left New York on January 24 for La Guayara, Venezuela, arrived here today. Her commander, Captain Jermiah Merithew, reports that the gunboat struck a fearful gale off Bermuda last Sunday, which continued for three days. Coal and water were exhausted and the mahogany deckwork was burned as fuel. The waves ran mountain high. The boats were stove in and the jibboom, bowsprit and spare spars were lost. For forty-eight hours Captain Merithew was on the bridge. Finally the bunker floors were burned, but this scarcely served to keep up steam and the last available fuel had gone into the furnace when the Restaurador sighted El Moro, Captain Merithew had to burn his last barrel of pork to get the gunboat into port. The Restaurador, however, suffered no serious injury. The necessary repairs can be made in a week and the gunboat will then proceed for La Guayra.
