The little entertainment planned by the city in the heps of collecting $1,000 back taxes was not up to the standard promised by the advertisements, a fact due to the unexpected intervention of a constable from Justice Altstadt's court with a writ of replayin. On this writ he took most of the articles that had been advertised for sale. Less than a dozen "exhibits" remained and these sold for a paltry $27. It remains now to be determined whether the action in replevin was taken in good faith, or whether it was a ruse by the resourceful Slobodisky to forestall the city in
