"Three Men and a Woman" is a story of life in New York by R. H. P. Miles. The eloped with an Austrian medical student to escape the monotony of rural life. They go to America and start housekeeping. The young physician works up in his profession but the woman grows apart from him in her eagerness for social excitement. An estrangement follows and the physician drops out of sighht while the wife plunges into the sea of gaiety. Her fascination entagles a former acquaintance, who conducts with her a fashionable "bachelor's apartments." Eventually there enters upon the scene a mysterious character whose hypnotic influence causes the woman to lure her lover to his death. The balance of the story is taken up with the arrest and conviction of the murderers. It is a thrilling and exciting story and will undoubtedly be greatly appreciated by those who are fond of that cind of literature. The story is said to be founded on real facts and the author claims only to have retouched them in the telling. G. W. Dillingham Co., New York. Price,

The recent death of Queen Victoria, after a long and most successful reign, has naturally called to the public attention the subject of England's rulers. This renders especially timely a revised edition of "Tha Queens of England from the Norman Conquest to the Present Time," by Mary Howitt. It is, as its title would indicate, a history of the queens who have occupied the English throne for the past 900 years. It commences with the life of Matilda of Flanders, wife of William the Conqueror, and ends with the death of Queen Victoria. The 550 pages are filled with information bearing upon the growth and development of a great nation and the part taken in it by the female rulers who from time to time have occupied the throne. In addition to the text there are a very large number of illustrations, copies of old paintings. is a book that will be found interesting even by the casual readers of history. It S. It is almost a year since the Ecumenical Conference on foreign missions was held in the city of New York and the printed report of the proceedings has just come to hand. People who are interested in foreign missions, however, will agree that it was worth waiting for. The report is comprised in two large volumes of attractive appearance and the arrangement of Literature of Nature Study for children will receive a small but valuable addition in "The Woodpeckers," by Fannie Hardy Eckstorm, which will be published from the Riverside press in March. The author has taken up a single group of birds repressented in all parts of the country and has given a lively yet accurate account of them. The book contains much interesting information.

What is hoped will prove a thoroughly satisfactory set of documents in English history, and particularly in English constitutional history, for text book use in colleges, has been prepared by Prof. George B. Adams of Yale in conjunction with Prof. H. Morse Stephens of Cornell. This book will be published within the next month or six weeks by the Macmillan company and will be issued at a low price in order to bring it within the reach of students.

"The Romance of the Hoavens" is the title of a popular yet scientific book on astronomy by the M. Elekerton professor of chemistry. "The Romance of the Heavens' is the title of a popular yet scientific book on astronomy by A. W. Bickerton, professor of chemistry at the New Zealand university, which the Macmilian company will publish immediately. A chapter which will probably cause some attention is that which dea's with the possible immortality of the Cosmos. The author has tried to write a book which with careful reading may be followed by any person with a good school knowledge of experimental science.

The Scribners announce the immediate publication of "The Old New York Frontier." by Francis W. Haisey, editor of the New York Times Saturday Review of Literature and Art. He describes the region around the headwaters of the Susquehanna and the period when that country was under the influence of Joseph Brant, the Mohawk chief, in the latter part of the eighteenth century. Mr. Haisey has made a special study of the life and surroundings and the wars of this part of New York state.

Among the early Fébruary publications will be ida M. Tarbell's "Napoleon and Josephine, a new and revised edition of her "Napoleon," which reached a sale of nearly 190,090 copies. The same elaborate illustrations will be preserved in the forthcoming edition, which has been supplemented and enlarged through the addition of a sympathetic sketch of Josephine. Writing of Miss Tarbell's work at this time recalls her very complete "Life of Lincoin," which is brought out in two volumes. Interest in Lincoin is reviving and this intimate view of him as a man should commend itself to many renders.

The fourth edition of "A Dictionary of American Authors," by Oscar Fay Adams, is amounced for publication by Houghton. Mifflin & Co. the latter part of February. Since its publication some years ago the book has continuously grown in favor and will now, no doubt, more than ever commend itself to editors, teachers, librarians and all who wish to know about American authors. The volume contains more than 7,500 names—ever 1,000 more than the third edition and 1.500 more than the first. The information afforded comprises brief statements of the life, services and writings of each of the authors named.

A realistic study of life in a New England factory village and a faithful portrayal of the trials of an inventor's life have been made by Jennette Lee in "A Pillar of Sait, announced for publication late in February by Mesars. Use of Garnishes. One important branch connected with the preparation of foods is too often neglectedthe art of garnishing. And yet so closely allied is it to cookery that the most skillful creation of the culinary artist fails in ts design to charm without the little maserhand touches that show in the manner of decorating the dishes.

A garnish means a mixture of several tasty morsels prepared in a rich sauce These dishes are very numerous and the various compounds derive their names from that of the sauce in which they are served, as a la poulette, a la financiere, and so on. This term is also applied in another sense meaning to fill up puff paste cases or shells with small birds, sweetbreads, mushrooms chicken and oysters and a rich sauce.

To garnish means to decorate a dish with something to add to its appearance and attractiveness. Suitable and appropriate materials must be selected for this purpose, according to the nature of the compound, and all tendency to elaboration must be avoided in home cooking and serving. Seemingly unstudied effects are best, especially when the materials composing the dish are of a dainty and delicate nature. Unsuitable and overdone effects in this line are more displeasing to persons of good taste than entire absence of decoration.

Besides the ever-useful and easily obtained parsley, we have a variety of ma-terial that may be used for decorating the various dishes. Among the "green things growing" we have lettuce, pepper grass cress, blanched celery and leaves, olives gherkins, capers, small pickled beans, nasturtiums and even the homely cabbage when all else fails. For brighter colors we have pickled bests, carrots, red peppers and red and yellow tomatoes. Added to this list are hard-boiled eggs, mushrooms, truffles, chicken livers, oysters and smelts. The latter are used by curling them around and fastening the tail securely in the mouth with a tiny skewer.

Attractive Dishes.

Rememor that we may descend to the level of the brutes and simply eat without a thought of any motive beyond satisfying the cravings of hunger. The individual who argues that things taste just as good without so much fuss, knows nothing of the added pleasure and enjoyment he would derive from foods more daintily served. The tired, hungry day laborer can satisfy his hunger from tin dinner pail, seated on the dusty roadside, but he looks forward to the enjoyment of his Sunday dinner served on a table with clean, though perhaps coarse linen, well polished, though inexpensive china and glass. Add to this a little care and taste in the arrangement of the dishea and see how quickly he will respond to the effort. Table influences are the greatest factors all through life in their refining influence on the human animal and therefore it is every mother's duty to see tha

Mothers often plead that they are too ousy to give the necessary time to garnish and decorate their everyday dishes. this is true, then let the daughters take this duty upon themselves. We go through our well-conducted public schools, where we are shown the artistic efforts of the pupils, and are often much surprised and pleased with the results. The grouping and arrangement of colors most frequently in evidence are from a study of vegetables or fruits, with perhaps a homely background of some familiar kitchen utensils Let these pupils apply this knowledge as home it making their table more attractive and the benefit will be far-reaching.

As we have already said, expensive materials and elaboration are not necessary to make our dishes attractive. The exer cise of a little of woman's inventive facults combined with good taste, will accomplish wonders in developing pleasing results When once it becomes a habit, it is just as easy and much more gratifying to do things nicely as it is to fall into the care-Compare the two following methods, the first being the ordinary one
