Recent Demonstrations of Friendliuess Between England and Germany Hasten Negotiations for New Conlition with Italy.

(Copyright, 1901, by Press Publishing Co.) PARIS, March 2 .- (New York World Cablegram-Special Telegram.) -For the past three months there have been persistent rumors of important diplomatic work being done in Italy by French and Russian agents. It was known that special envoys from Parls and St. Petersburg had been repeatedly sent to Rome to confer jointly with the ambassadors of both countries, and even directly with King Victor Emanuel, but every effort to ascertain the purport of the mysterious transactions have heretofore

Italy is about to withdraw from the German-Austrian alliance to form with France and Russia a new triple alliance. Said the World correspondent's informant:

"Emperor William and Emperor Francis Joseph a few days ago demanded an explanation from Italy, and a very clear one has just been forwarded from Rome. There is to be a new combination, embracing Italy. France and Russia, and the details Crispi's policy as injurious to Italy's wel- the mercy of a breathing spell. fare. King Humbert himself had misgivings concerning the wisdom of allowing Italy to be towed behind Prussle and Austria, to be used only in an emergency, but Crispi had uncanny influence over the murthe initiative and was always ready to seek shelter in a constitutional monarch's irre-

"Besides, Humbert dreaded nothing like spreading republican ideas in his realm. which he ascribed to the great propagandic force of the friendship between the Italian and the French people. He therefore allowed Crispi and his disciples to pursue their policy of estrangement from France and trying by every means to convince the Italians that their nation would profit by an alliance with the destinies of the German empire, as shaped by Bismarck. The results have proved disastrous, economically and politically, to Italy, which has been perity has been absolutely destroyed and her political prestige reduced to naught. When Victor Emanuel ascended to the throne he lost no time in making overtures to France. His personal sympathies and judgment demanded, while the public sentiment of the peninsula clamored, for speedy bringing together of the two Latin nations.

Russin Stipulates Conditions.

"Russia was immediately consulted, and she gave assent under conditions which are now being discussed. The recent demonstrations of friendliness between England and Germany have hastened the negotiations wonderfully. France and Russia feel that the Austro-Hungarian empire is threatened with disruption soon, and that if Italy were detached from Germany even an Anglo-German combination could easily be checkmated.

"The recent removal by France of cer tain prohibitive duties against Italian products is significant in this connection, as is also the intense newspaper campaign, evidently subsidized by the government, just started across the Alps, aimed to undo the previous work on the public mind by showing how closely related the two races are and how similar are their political and commercial interests, and recalling the part taken by French armies in effecting Italian

"The coming visit of the Italian naval squadron to French waters, where a number of Russian men-of-war will also be present, will serve as a pretext for great friendly demonstrations, and an official proclamation of the new alliance will probably be made then."

LONDON, March 2, 1901.—To the Editor of the World: The Irish party has begun magnificently, Its shillty, industry and resolute spirit have worked a veritable parliamentary miracle. Just consider the circumstances. We are confronted by a government, backed by an unexampled majority, recently strengthened by a triumphant appeal to the country. We have besides a liberal party lacking both in leader and policy and sunk into a pitiable condition of inefficiency. A large percentage of our men are new to Parliament, where we have to face, in addition, the prejudice which Irish nationalists always encounter in this alien assembly. Yet by unceasing vigilance, by maintaining the constant attendance of nearly seventy members, we have initiated most of the busin as which has occupied the house and have controlled what we did not institute.

We have carried by our votes the miners' eight-hour bill, which will effect an industrial revolution; we have twice reduced the government majority of 134 to below 40.

In two weeks we have demonstrated that a united, determined, active Irish party, enabled to maintain continual attendance at Westminster, has the British Parilament at its mercy, which is the first and most important step toward compelling it to marry her, will soon have a private submarthe boat, which she contracted for with grant national self-government to Ireland JOHN E. PARISIAN TRUST ON Established Painters Try to Block the Progress of Struggling (Copyright, 1901, by Press Publishing Co.) PARIS, March 2 .- (New York World Cablegram-Special Telegram.)-A quarrel between J. W. Alexander, now in New York, and his brethren in the Paris Society of American Painters, has started a tumultuous discussion not only among Americans, but all over Paris. Despite the denials of such men as W. T. Dannat, E. L. Weeks and J. L. Stewart, Alexander's resignation is demanded because he objected to the society's tactics in deliberately blocking the way of younger artists. It is believed by people conversant with the mat ter that Mr. Alexander will make interest ing revelations when he decides to speak.

The revolt against the group of men known as the Paris Society of American Painters has been brewing for two years. The society comprises about a dozen mem bers. All except one or two elderly and well-established painters are fully determined to keep down threatening competition. Many members of the American Art association, a rival and much more nu merous organization, are especially bitter against what they call the "trust." Monoply on Orders.

It appears that the society will not accept new members, but has gradually assumed the function of representing American art in Paris, monopolizing public and private orders and advising and deciding what painters shall be allowed exhibition space on such occasions as the recent Paris exposition and the forthcoming Panamerican exposition in Buffalo. Its members are wealthy and by constant social entertaining and private views have succeeded in impressing the French official world with the conviction that they alone are the chiefs of American artists, thereby securing all decorations, salon medals and remunerative orders.

Great friendship has existed between the young princess and the old empress ever since the Princess Beatrice fell so desperately in love with the prince imperial, going so far as to visit the pope and personally implore him to employ himself in removing opposition to their marriage. It was because of the impossibility of the match that the prince went to Africa, where he was killed.
