His Rigid Stiffness, Prince Engalitscheff, military plenipotentiary of Russia, imparted to Omaha the distinction of passing through it Thursday afternoon on his way from the Pacific coast to Washington, where he goes to consult with President McKinley in a matter touching the transfer of some real estate in northern China. With his retinue of servants and bodyguard, resplendent in his imperial vestments, the prince arrived in a private car over the Burlington shortly after 3 o'clock. The car stopped only a short time at the depot. His starchiness seemed not the least interested in the fact that he was in one of the greatest live stock markets of the world and vouchsafed only to pull the silk hangings of his private car aside and glance languidly at the Tenth managed to get a glimpse of the Presence. It was reclining on a divan in a graceful but unstudied posture, playfully teasing a milk-white marmoset, while the court barber, by means of starch, glue and varnish, molded the royal mustache into a pair of hirsute daggers. It was in neglige. A Japanese kimono covered with gold embroidered butterflies was carelessly thrown over its pale silk pajamas. Upon its feet were a dainty little pair of Parisian slippers. It didn't look particularly flerce, except for its mustache and a quantity of sable-hued Belshazzars which leaked ouof the imperial countenance. "By January of next year," said a Burlington official, "there will not be left a vestige of the old track between Chicago and the Missouri river, except a few stretches of five or six muse each. The entire line from Chicago to Tower $10 west from Chicago, the number of miles indicated, has been rebuilt except the stretch of five miles of track near Ottumwa, and the contract for this was awarded a few days ago to D. D. Streeter of Chicago. Work will begin there within a few weeks and will be completed in August, 1902. It is estimated that the average cost per mile of the new track will be in the neighborhood of $100,000. Several steam shovels and about 350 men will be given employment for more than a year. That, with the other work which is contemplated for this season, many of the contracts for which have already been let, will bring the improvement practically to the Missouri river.

The fight in the courts is technically between the Utah & California company and the Utah, Nevada & California. Under the law the railroad had to be completed over the grade begun by the Union Pacific within five years or the company forfeited its title to the land. This forfeiture occurred and since then the grade has been held by the Utah & California and the Utah. Nevada & California companies, though neither completed the work. The latter road is regarded as an auxiliary of the Oregen Short Line, while it is said that the men behind Senator Clark's San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake company are backing the fight for the Utah & California company.

Travel Southward. William Flaunelly, one of the veteran raveling passenger agents who has visited Omaha for a number of years, is in the city, representing the Southern railway, the rails of which traverse over the entire southeast.

"The Southern railway," Mr. Flannelly said. "has inaugurated a campaign for western business on a more extensive scale than ever before. The reason is that the west is increasing in favor with eastern and southern railway managers. They are lows: E. Bevins, gift electric dining room beginning to realize more fully than ever before the big volume of passenger traffic which originates in the great transmissouri region, and are making efforts to get a portion of it. The improvement of the south, the opening of new industries and its general commercial advancement also contributes largely to the new order of things. Western people are going south more than ever before, some of them for the purpose of investment and others with the idea in view of finding pleasure in the balmy climate for which the south is noted. The outlook for an increased business for the Southern railway from this territory is very good and I am much satisfied with he results of my trip through the new territory that the road with which I am connected has opened up."

The Southern railway has recently opened passenger office in the Exchange building. Kansas City, and that is Mr. Flannelly's headquarters.

BURLINGTON BUYS FIFTY ENGINES Adopts the Locomotive Invention of One of Its Own Officials.

Announcement has been made of the fact that the Schnectady locomotive works have secured the patent right to build railroad engines of the so-called prairie type. In this same connection the Burlington management has given an order for fifty engines at a cost of $750,000. Back of these facts there is an interesting story, which tells how a Chicago railroad man has made a reputation and is now assured of a handsome fortune. It will be news to every railroad man outside of the Burlington's Chicago offices that the prairie type of en gine, which is now being used by a half dozen railroads, is the invention of Frederick A. Delano, superintendent of motive power for the Burlington.

The prairie type of engine is simply machine with an exceedingly wide firebox and an extra length of boiler. Under the old type the limit in width of the firebox was three feet and four inches, while under the new limit it is six feet. The patent for the type was issued in January and as a result several manufacturers had to settle for having infringed upon the patent. Experiments made with the engine disclose the fact that by its use there is a saving of fuel amounting to between 10 and 20 per cent. Owing to this conservation of fuel and the width of the firebox it is also possible to get greater speed

3776 Seven Goren Skirt, 22 to 30 in. waist

Woman's Seven-Gored Skirt with Tucked Circular Flounce, No. 3776-Shaped and tucked flounces not alone hold the fancy of the hour, they also promise to retain their supremacy for many months to come. The graceful example illustrated combines the favorite points with tucks in a way that means a peculiarly graceful result and can be relied upon to give certain satisfaction. The original is made from satin foulard and trimmed with lace insertion, overlaid with strips of velvet ribbon; but all silk and lightweight woolen materials as well as such cotton and linen fabrics as batiste, mull, madras, foulardine, lawn, dimity and the like are entirely appropriate to the design, while the trimming can be varied again

The skirt is cut in seven gores and is snug and close about the hips, while it flares freely and gracefully below the knees. The fullness at the back is laid in an inserted plait after the latest accepted style. The flounce is circular, with groups of tucks arranged to meet each alternate point, and is designed to be applied over the skirt in the outline indicated in the pattern, but if preferred can he cut away beneath and the flounce seamed to the pointed edge. Those who have read Marie Corelli's novel, "The Sorrows of Satan," will find in the dramatization of this weird, uncanny story an interesting play, but to the average theater-goer the piece is at times tiresomely talky and lacking in explanatory dialogue or action sufficient to make wholly clear the theme of the story. Al though there are several interesting dramatic climaxes, some witty dialogue and several clever character studies introduced, they are not properly blended to keep the interest of the speciator from lagging frequently during the four acts of the play. There has been an effort made to point a moral which can hardly prove otherwise than successful, for the play has the same effect upon an adult as a creepy ghost story told to a child at bedtime. frightens one so badly that he is in fear of his own shadow. And so with Miss Corelli's story. It makes one fear the consequence of wrong-doing, since they are so plainly pointed out. Another of the good points of the piece is that it proves to be a decidedly clever satire on English society. There is also some fun poked at the American girls who annually go abroad to purchase with father's millions a titled husband. The limelight is turned upon that portion of the social world which causes the balance to be held up to ridicule by a broad-minded person. The company is one of average merit toroughout, there being but few weak spots in it. The leading roles are all capably sustained. The production, while not elab orate, is an adequate one, The engagement continues for the bal-

Applying at that office I was informed that it was not there and was told by Mr. Fleming that the statement must be in the treasurer's office. But when it could not be found in the city hall they came to the conclusion that it must have been left in the court house. My wife did not fill out a statement for 1851 or 1852, yet my personal tax for 1892 was $3.35 on $12 or $16 worth, of goods. I do not blame Mr. Hennings for doing his duty, but if it is his duty to notify and collect why was it not the duty of the former treasurers to do the same? Had I received a notice that Mr. Bolin or any other city treasurer I would have called at his office as promptly as I did when I received Mr. Hennings' notice.

When I informed Mr. Hennings that there was a mistake and that I wanted to take it before the council and have it corrected he said even if the council did annul the tax he would have to pay or have my furniture taken away and ordered one of his deputies to call the van. All I wish to say to the ities are so much greater during the Spring months than at any other time of the year.

There is but one way to ward off such dangers, and that is to fortify the human office, 35 W. 14th St., New York City.

Deadly dangers lurk in the ground left bare by the departing snow. All Winter long there have been accumulating deadly disease germs.

These have been protected and kept alive by the covering of snow and now, with the first warm days, these death-bringing microbes are awakened by the rays of the sun, and as the ground dries they are carried to all corners of the community in the dust that is blown everywhere by the Spring winds.

The human body at this time is partieularly susceptible to these germs, especially the germs of fevers. The system has been depleted by the foregoing Winter. The blood is sluggish and filled with impurities. The nerves have not recovered from the tension they have been under for the past months. The stomach, the bowels, the kidneys, the liver are all at their worst.

It is therefore, not strange that these germs of fevers. The system is depleted, one should dread any severe illness. The vitality is at a low ebb. There is less nower of resistance to throw off disease, and it is on this sectour that fatalities are so much greater during the Spring months than at any other time of the ver.

There is but one way to ward off such
