

UNDERSELLING

You must not think wrongly of us if we are perhaps a little enthusiastic of our large business—we merely offer it as a powerful argument, and as an undeniable proof that most of Omaha's householders consider this the best store at which to supply their home-furnishing wants. This fact is full of significance—demonstrating conclusively that after comparing our goods and prices with what is shown at other stores—prospective buyers find here better goods for less money than elsewhere. Think of it!—and then decide whether it is not also to your advantage to investigate the People's store prices and goods—the standard of quality being always maintained.

INDIANA HONORS ITS DEAD

State's Foremost Living Citizens Attend the Harrison Funeral.

THOUSANDS GATHER AT STATE HOUSE

Not All Can Be Satisfied in Their Desire to Look Again Upon the Face of the Deceased.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 16.—Beneath a canopy of black placed on the rotunda of the capitol building, in a casket covered with the silken folds of the stars and stripes, surrounded by thousands of blossoms, while over all swung the great battle flag that flew from the warship Indiana during the naval battle of Santiago, the body of ex-President Harrison lay in state for nine hours today.

During the time fully 25,000 persons passed by the coffin to take a last look at the distinguished dead and when at 10 o'clock tonight the capitol doors were finally closed and the people told that no more could enter there were several thousand more waiting patiently in line. The body lay in state from 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock at night and not once during the hours was there a break or halt in the lines which passed rapidly by on the right and left of the casket. It was an Indiana day with its dead and most touching was the esteem and honor in which General Harrison was held by his fellow citizens revealed. In front of the Harrison home, along the streets through which the remains were carried, their way to and from the state house, in the lines that stretched at times a half mile from the doors of the capitol, men, women and children stood for hours waiting their opportunity to pay a tribute of respect to the dead. It was an immense throng, but one more easy to handle, or rather one that required less handling, never gathered anywhere. There was no jostling, no disorder, no disturbance of any kind. Not a single objectionable feature marred the day. The weather was perfect.

Start to State House.

The hour set for the formation of the parade from the state house to the Harrison home to receive the body and return with it to the state house was 10:30 and promptly at the time set the infantry and artillery were drawn up in Washington street on the south side of the state house. At 10:45 Brigadier General W. J. McKee, commanding the state troops, ordered the advance and quickly wheeling into line the infantry poured in a long stream along Washington street on its way to the house.

A dense throng had gathered around the Harrison home on Delaware street hours before the procession appeared. Down Delaware street much farther than the eye could reach the crowd packed the sidewalks to the doors of the residences along each side of the way.

By 11 o'clock part of the second division of the funeral procession had formed near Thirteenth and Delaware streets. General Carman, the marshal, and his staff, mounted and attired in citizen's clothing of plain black, directed the movements of the various organizations as they took positions to await the approach of the other division, which was on its way from the capitol.

The boys' brigade, soldiers of the future, crew with every star, were first past the staff. The Seventieth regiment, General Harrison's old command, soldiers whose fighting days have gone, came next and waited for the moment when they should have the place of honor in the funeral.

The boys' brigade, soldiers of the future, crew with every star, were first past the staff. The Seventieth regiment, General Harrison's old command, soldiers whose fighting days have gone, came next and waited for the moment when they should have the place of honor in the funeral.

Distinguished Men in Line.

Then came an hour's wait, during which a number of distinguished men mingled with the crowds in the street. The tall figure of Senator Charles W. Fairbanks came up Thirteenth street. With John B. Eiam he stood and talked for half an hour, then they were joined by Judge Woods and the three greeted Senator Albert J. Beveridge, who came a little later. As the bar association of Marion county passed the two gravely bowed and bowed to the numerous silent greetings they received.

Inside the house, the magnificent casket, draped with the banner of the Loyal Legion, had been closed for the time being and was ready for the journey to the capitol. On the east wall, a large wreath of Scotch heather and orchids, the tribute of General Harrison's daughter, Mary Harrison McKee. The drawing room to the left of the reception hall, in which the casket was placed, was a mass of flowers. President McKinley had sent a magnificent design of Golden Gate roses and lilies of the valley from the White House conservatory. A great start filling one corner of the room, was from the servants of the household. A Masonic lodge of Indianapolis, composed of Chinamen, sent a splendid tribute of a harp and trumpets. A large basket of azaleas came from the state officers. The offering of the Seventieth regiment was its corps badge, a great star of blue immortal.

Shortly before the undertaker completed his arrangements for the removal of the casket, Mrs. Harrison, with little Elizabeth, both attired in deep mourning, came in the apartment to view the face of their husband and father, as they were called.

Mrs. Harrison, with little Elizabeth, both attired in deep mourning, came in the apartment to view the face of their husband and father, as they were called.

Early in the morning Mrs. Harrison entered the room where her husband lay, to be alone with him for probably the last time. As she stood in the darkened chamber, the door of the room opened noiselessly and an old soldier, bent with age and shivering in the bitter cold of the morning, came slowly in. He did not see Mrs. Harrison and leaned over the dead face and tears came to his eyes.

"Colonel," he said softly, and touched the white hand on the general's breast—"Colonel."

Mrs. Harrison came to where he was standing and said: "Am Mrs. Harrison?" "You will excuse me," the old man said, "for intruding on your grief, but I wanted to see my old commander once more—just once more. I have tried very hard to come to Indianapolis to see him when he was alive and never could. When I heard that he was dead I wanted to give him the old salute for the last time." and raising his hand to his forehead in true military fashion the old man turned away and passed from the room. The incident nearly overpowered Mrs. Harrison and it was some time before she regained her composure.

At a quarter to 12 o'clock General McKee ordered 2500 infantrymen, standing at "attention" on both sides of the street, to "present arms." In the reverential hush which ensued the casket was carried from the house and placed in the funeral car. Six sergeants from the Second regiment of the state militia and two sergeants from the Indianapolis light artillery carried the casket. Admiral George A. B. Brown, representing the navy, General Lewis Wallace, representing the army, and Judge of honor which followed the pallbearers from the residence to the house.

The aged survivors of the Seventieth regiment marched to their place of honor behind the hearse and when the old, bent soldiers of the civil war saw the black-covered casket holding the body of their old friend and leader borne to the hearse many of them were affected to tears.

The Bar association and the clubs marched slowly with uncovered heads and took up their places in the procession. Arriving at the state house the escort was drawn up to one side and then, while the military presented arms, the drums rolled softly, the casket was borne into the state house, where, surrounded by its guard of honor, with fixed bayonets, it rested until night.

Returned to the Home.

The body of General Harrison was returned to his home at 11:30 tonight. It was 10:30 when the doors of the state house were closed to the public. It then required an hour to remove the body from the state house to the hearse and make the trip to the house. The casket was carried from the state house by the same non-commissioned officers of the National guard who had brought it in at noon.

The body was escorted by a battery of artillery, three companies of infantry and a detachment of police. Three citizens, friends of General Harrison, watch the casket during the night.

AT THE CHURCH AND CEMETERY

Family and Friends of General Harrison to Gather for Last Simple Ceremonies.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 16.—In marked contrast to the military and other display of today, by which the state of Indiana paid its last tribute of honor to General Harrison, will be the funeral services tomorrow afternoon at the First Presbyterian church. The rites will be simple, dignified and unostentatious.

The arrangements for the services tomorrow have been practically completed in detail. The church has been richly but simply decorated with drapings of black and white and the American flag. The entrances have been draped in black. In the interior and by way of relief to the more somber trappings the altar and rostrum are covered with profusion of palms and potted plants.

Owing to the limited capacity of the church, which will seat only about 1,000, and because of the great demand for seats the committee arrangements found it necessary to announce that admission to the church would be to friends of the family by card. The services tomorrow are intended only for the friends and relatives of General Harrison and this decision was deemed advisable in order to guarantee that the church would not be overrun with persons who had no claim to entrance and the friends crowded out.

The honorary pallbearers were selected as far as possible from the members of ex-President Harrison's cabinet. The list, as announced by Secretary Tibbott, is as follows: Ex-Secretary of the Navy, General Benjamin F. Tracy of New York, ex-Postmaster General John Wamaker of Philadelphia, ex-Attorney General W. H. Miller of Indianapolis, ex-Secretary of Interior John W. Noble of St. Louis, ex-Secretary of Treasury Charles Foster of Fostoria, O.; General Law Wallace of Crawfordsville, Ind.; Judge Judson Harmon of Cincinnati, who was attorney general under President Cleveland, and Judge William A. Woods of Indianapolis.

The active pallbearers are all from this city and are men who were friends of General Harrison for many years. They are: Augustus L. Mason, James Whitcomb Riley, Evans Wooten, Harry J. Milligan, Clifford Arick, William C. Bobbs, Harry S. New, Howard Cole, John L. Griffiths, Newton Booth Tarkington, Hilton U. Brown and Samuel Reid.

To the Church.

The friends and relatives who will compose the funeral party will gather at the Harrison home in North Delaware street at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. A few minutes later the hearse, followed by the carriages bearing the members of the party, will move south on Delaware to Massachusetts avenue. The procession will pass to Pennsylvania avenue on Massachusetts avenue, thence north on Pennsylvania to one block to the church.

The seats for the relatives and other members of the funeral party, 150 in number, will be reserved in the middle of the church. The services will be conducted by Rev. M. L. Haines, pastor of the First Presbyterian church and for many years the close friend of the late general, assisted by Rev. Dr. Samuel J. Nicolls, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of St. Louis. Dr. Nicolls was selected by Mrs. Harrison to assist Dr. Haines, because of the close friendship that had been formed between General Harrison and Dr. Nicolls during the summer vacations which the Harrison family have spent in the Adirondacks.

Dr. Haines will deliver the principal address, while Dr. Nicolls will read the scriptural lessons and offer the invocation. The music, which will be simple in its character, will be furnished by the full choir of the church, composed of twenty singers of the city, under the direction of Edward Nell. The hymns sung will be ones that were special favorites of General Harrison. There will be two of them, "Rock of Ages" and "Hark, Hark, My Soul."

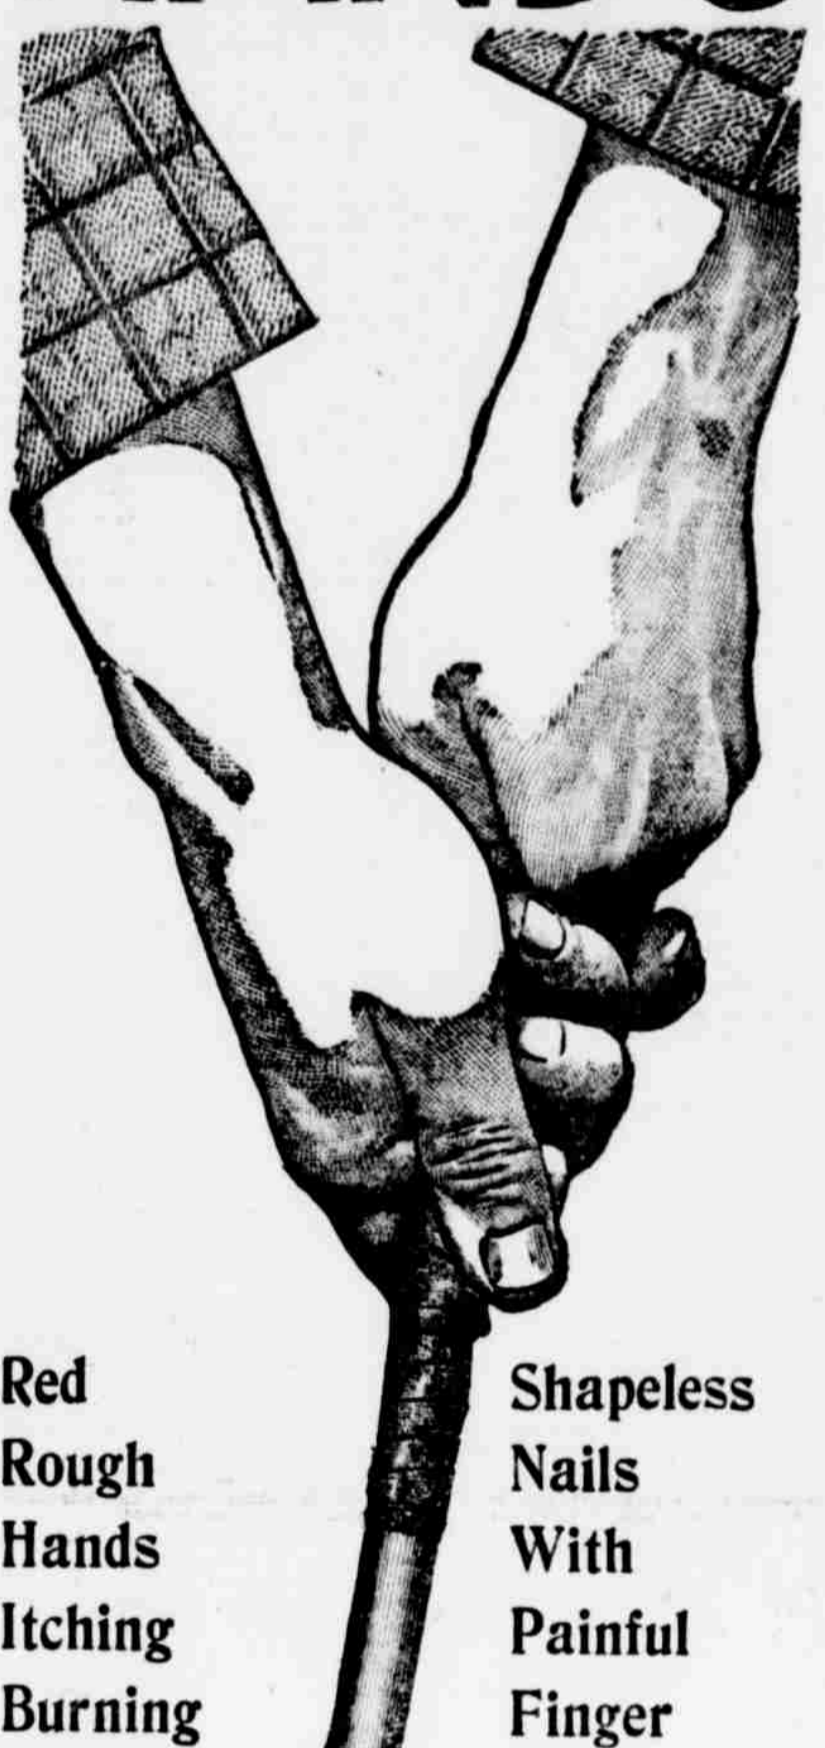

At the conclusion of this service the funeral party will leave the church going direct to Crown cemetery. The services at the cemetery will be exceedingly simple and brief, consisting of a prayer and the recital of the words usually spoken as the body is lowered into the grave.

The funeral party will be composed of Mrs. Harrison and daughter, Elizabeth, Mrs. Caroline B. Stroud of New York, Mrs. Harrison's most intimate friend; Mrs. Mary Harrison McKee, daughter of General Harrison, and her husband, Robert McKee; Russell B. Harrison, son of General Harrison, with his wife and son; John Scott Harrison and Carter B. Harrison, brothers of General Harrison; Mrs. Betty J. Eaton and Mrs. Anna Morris, sisters of General Harrison; Mrs. Newcomer, aunt of General Harrison; Lieutenant Commander John F. Parker and Mrs. Parker, who is a sister of Mrs. Harrison; Secretary E. F. Tibbott and Mrs. Tibbott, President McKinley and his private secretary, George B. Cortelyou; Governor and Mrs. Durbin, General Benjamin F. Tracy of New York, General and Mrs. John H. Noble of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. John Wamaker of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Foster of Fostoria, O.; Judge and Mrs. Judson Harmon of Cincinnati, Governor Nash of Ohio and party, W. H. H. Miller and family, Judge and Mrs. William A. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Augusta L. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Evans Wooten, James Whitcomb Riley and Mrs. Harry J. Milligan, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Arick, William C. Bobbs, Newton Booth Tarkington, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cole, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Griffiths, Mr. and Mrs. Hilton U. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reid, Ben D. Wolcott and family, Dr. and Mrs. John M. Kitcher and Senator Charles W. Fairbanks.

Tomorrow at sunrise the United States arsenal will fire a salute of thirteen guns and at one-half hour intervals throughout the day a gun will be fired. Just before sunset a salute of forty-five guns will be fired.

President McKinley will be entertained quietly by Governor and Mrs. Durbin tomorrow. The governor will, with the reception committee, meet the president at the Union station at 6:40 tomorrow.

Advice to Office Seekers.

April and May are the months when most people do their moving. The prospects are that the demand for offices in Omaha will never be so great as it will be this spring. There are not a great many rooms vacant in but there are among them several which are particularly choice; one directly in front of the elevator on the 5th floor, one on the 1st floor next to the entrance to The Bee business office, a suite of three rooms on the 2nd floor, and a very large office and vault on the ground floor facing 15th street. Besides these, there are four or five smaller rooms in various parts of the building.

The rents are reasonable and the service perfect.
