

Nearing the End

The Bee's splendid Century Club offer is drawing toward the closing day. Many things that come and go are soon forgotten, but this offer will leave a lasting impression, both among those who have taken advantage of it and those who missed it. The Bee congratulates the many readers and friends who have already availed themselves of the price saving which our club affords. Those who secure the few remaining sets of the Century at half price may consider themselves fortunate.

Omaha, Neb., March 15, 1901. The Century Dictionary, Cyclopedia and Atlas needs no commendation from me nor from any one. It is sufficiently well known. Every one who can, will have this work of reference. Any one who has the Century at hand will probably refer to it more frequently than to all other reference books put together.

C. G. PEARSE, Superintendent of Instruction.

Half price and little monthly payments on the ten best books in the world characterizes The Bee's offer as a very important one to everyone who speaks and writes English. It has been proven that The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia and Atlas is better than any ten other sets of reference combined. In justice to readers and friends in nearby towns one-half of the sets now left will be reserved for them and the balance are for Omaha. Upon receipt of the corner coupon below, information will be sent free to anyone and anywhere.
