This action of Senor Gemez is attributed to the bitter attack made upon him yes terday by the radicals for having accepted portions of the Platt amendment. GOVERNOR ALLEN TELLS WHY

In First Annual Report Says Porto Rico Hasn't Advanced Because Energy Was Lacking.

WASHINGTON, May 21.-G vernor Charles H. Allen of Porto Rico has presented to the DRAGA AT ROYAL TABLE president, through the State department, his first annual report. The governor expresses the opinion that a scheme of colonial administration, such as is found in the Danish, French and English West Indies, might be safely instituted, with variations dependent upon the future policy fers to the many suggestions offered that the form of territorial government adopted in the United States be applied to Porto Rico, but points out that a standard form of such government, while useful in the United States, would not apply successfully to this island possession. He calls attention to the fact that while in such close proximity to the United States Porto Rico has been a comparatively unknown island to Ameri-

"I feel, as the result of a year's close study on the spot of all conditions sur-rounding this problem," said Governor Allen, "that congress went quite as far as it could safely venture in the form of government existing on the island, and as the result of experience and observation I fully believe with good men devoted to the work the island will develop faster under such form, its people, through experience and education will advance more rapidly in their knowledge of civic virtues under a guldance of present methods than could be gained in any other way."

The governor speaks plainly in presenting the reason why this island has been at a practical standstill for nearly four centuries and says that in a climate where a man can lie in a hammock, pick a banana with one hand and dig a sweet potato with one foot the incentive to idleness is easy to yield to and brings its inevitable consequences.

In conclusion Governor Allen urged the introduction of fresh blood and Anglo-Saxon push and energy as the means of lifting the little island out of its lethargy and by thrift and industry develop its riches to their full measure.

Secretary Root Endorses Action of Board of Officers at West

WASHINGTON, May 21.-Secretary Root as approved the action of the board of officers at West Point, which recommended the dismissal of five cadets and the suspension of six others. This sustains the Colonel Mills and the other officers in the recent disturbances at the academy. Colonel Mills, superintendent of the military academy, had a long consultation with the secretary of war today relative to recent disorders among the cadets at West Point. The papers in the cases of the cadets who have been tried for offenses against the authorities have been in the department for some time. Superintendent Mills explained the condition at the academy, insisting that many of the published reports were exaggerated. The present difficulty grows out of the attempt to suppress hazing and the restrictions that have een made in this direction since Colonel

Mills became superintendent. The superintendent spoke in the highest terms of the cadets and thought it was only a question of a short time before the customary conditions would be resumed. The matter of discipline was in question and that must be maintained. The secretary was much interested in the statement of Colonel Mills. Colonel Davis, the next judge advocate of the army, who recently has been stationed at West Point, was present during the greater portion of the ginnir interview. The papers in the cases that recently have been tried are to be considered and passed upon by General Davis. The names of the cadets dismissed and suspended will be announced at the mili-

Heavy Firing by All Four. There was heavy firing by all four forces encountered on the way. Our men were prepared for the fight and obeyed their orders to follow the rearguard of the enemy, as soon as the latter succeeded in orders to follow the rearguard of the enemy, as soon as the latter succeeded in passing our posts, until there was an opportunity to inflict more losses. Keeping in touch with the enemy in this manner our detachments arrived at the places in which the enemy passed the night, and continued hostilities without interruption, inflicting considerable losses, as was proved by the dead abandoned by the Americans in the different places. The following day, while ret it was barely dawn, the firing began generally. The Americans were surrounded by all our troops, who did not lose them from sight. Those who had passed the night at Fjorista, Taloto and at the inn took the Jovellar road in order to join the main detachment of their troops, and remained in Jovellar during the entire day and night of November 28, until 7 a. m. on the 27th, when they undertook to retreat via Cabraran. In passing the village of Amianon they were heavily fired upon by the troops of the brave commandante, Toledo, who were suitably posted in a thicket, waiting for the enemy to pass. The Americans, already oppressed with weariness, sleeplessness and loaded down with wounded and dead, seemed more dead than alive and for this and other reasons evaded the fire.

Persons of Camalig who saw the Amercans returning say, with all certainty, that they carried eighty dead and wounded, the commanding officer of the expedition being among the former.
