REDELL IN DISTRICT COURT

Fire Chief's Plea for Restraining Order Before Judge Estelle.

DECISION COMES NEXT WEDNESDAY

Redell's Lawyers Set Forth that he is a City Officer and Can Be Removed Only by Joint Action of Mayor and City Council.

Has the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners the authority to bring to trial and remove from office a chief of the fire department?

This was the question to which Judge Estelle confined the arguments of the attorneys for Chief Redell, who appeared in the district court yesterday and asked that an order be granted restraining the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners from bringing Chief Redell to trial on charges preferred against him by John Bruder and other members of the fire department. City Attorney W. J. Connell spoke on behalf of the members of the board.

After hearing the arguments in the case Judge Estelle extended the time of the temporary restraining order until next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, when a decision will be rendered.

Three Points Set Forth.

The attorneys for Chief Redell attempted to establish three points, as follows: That Chief Redell is a city officer. That the charter provides for the removal of city officers by the joint action of the mayor and city council.

That the board is proceeding against Chief Redell in violation of the charter which attempts to give it power to discharge city officers. In support of the contention that Chief Redell is a city officer and not merely a city employe his attorneys emphasized the fact that the fire chief is a member of the Advisory board, a body recognized by the charter as being of great importance.

The attorneys asserted that the Advisory board is superior to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners and that it would be absurd for the commissioners to assume jurisdiction over members of the Advisory board.

Chief Not a City Officer.

Mr. Connell maintained that the fire chief is not a city officer and is amenable to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners the same as other members of the fire and police departments.

He denied that the commissioners are acting under authority acquired through an ordinance and asserted that the charter of the city of Omaha delegates power to the board to remove members of the departments under its charge. Mr. Connell asserted that the sections of the charter providing for the establishment and regulation of a fire and police board have not been rendered void by decisions of the supreme court. The action of the court made but one material change. It took the appointment of the members of the board away from the governor and delegated that power to the city.

Attorneys for Chief Redell attempted to show that the board is violating its own rules in bringing action against the chief. A provision in the alleged rules of the board requires that charges against members of the department must be preferred within thirty days.

W. I. Kierstead, secretary to the board, was called to the witness stand and testified that part of the rules which governed former boards had been used by this board, but that no set of rules was regularly adopted until last Friday evening. It was maintained by Redell's attorneys that rules were adopted by the board in the hope of avoiding any irregularity in their proceedings. Judge Estelle expressed the opinion that the rules of the board play an unimportant part in the case and said that in his opinion the board has the right to change them at will.

The court room was crowded during the hearing. Among the men present were: Euclid Martin, E. M. Andreesen, E. E. Bruce, F. E. Sanborn, T. C. Byrne, Arthur C. Smith and Charles H. Pickens. Mayo Moore and all the other members of the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners were in attendance.

SUPREME COURT UNSHAKEN

Jacksonian Club's Promised Earthquake Proves to Be a Mild Affair.

There was little doing at the meeting of the Jacksonian club last night, which was called to protest against the decision of the United States supreme court in the Porto Rico case. Such protest as was made was in mild terms. No resolutions were submitted for adoption and most of the evening was taken up by Mr. Smyth in explaining the tenor of the decision and the various views of the judges. About the only conclusion which Mr. Smyth announced was the conviction that if the framers of the constitution had had the Porto Rican case as a precedent before them at the time the document was written they would never have questioned that congress should have the power over any people on earth without just such limitations as were imposed in the government of people here at home. He thought that anyone who reads the decision of the majority is forced to the conclusion that the court did some hair-splitting, was abstruse and showed a painful lack of candor, as the judges evidently had to seek excuses in the constitution.

Other addresses were made by A. E. Langdon and W. R. Patrick of Sarpy county, and J. J. Point of McKinley standing in the shoes of King George III of England, and Judge Points echoed the sentiment. The meeting night of the club was changed from the first Saturday to the first Friday in each month.

BELLSTEOT FAINTS AWAY

Conductor of the Famous Band Overcome Temporarily by the Strain.

Hermann Bellstedt, while conducting the overture, "Fra Diavolo," at the concert, last night, was suddenly overcome with a faintness and fell unconscious upon the stage. The band stopped playing immediately and there was a marked commotion throughout the audience. Several physicians who were in the tent went to his assistance.

Mr. Bellstedt's condition was found not to be serious. The faintness passed away in ten minutes and during this interval George Seath took the baton and conducted the band. It is believed that Mr. Bellstedt's indisposition was due to overwork.

The band entered last evening on the second week of the Omaha Musical Festival with the conditions more in their favor than they were for the opening week. The weather has been most decidedly against them since the opening of the festival, yet the audience has been steadily growing.

For this afternoon's matinee the program will open with the hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour," followed by ten numbers, including a flute solo by M. Chevre.

There are two solos on this evening's program, one for the piccolo by Herr Blum, and a cornet solo by Bellstedt. The concluding number will be Sousa's latest march, "The Invincible Eagle," played for the first time, not only in Omaha, but by the Bellstedt band at the two concerts yesterday.

Monday evening the lovers of rag music will have their desire gratified, as ten numbers of that style of composition will be played between ten standard numbers. Tuesday afternoon Conductor Bellstedt will show how he rehearses his band, at the concert, will take the form of a public rehearsal, and all requests made by the audience will be complied with, if practicable.

Tuesday evening will be rendered for the first time in Omaha selections from Stuart's musical comedy, "Florodora."

Wednesday evening will be the Knights and Ladies of Security night, and the program will be devoted to grand and comic opera.

Thursday evening a classical concert will be given. Friday's programs are over for Saturday afternoon the chorus of public school children, under the supervision of Miss Fannie Arnold, will sing a decoration hymn, and for Saturday evening a concert of "Auld Lang Syne" is announced.

FAST TRAINS FOR THE POOR

Common People's Time is Worth as Much to Them as the Millionaire's to Him.

(Copyright, 1901, by Press Publishing Co.) PARIS, June 8.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—Minister of Public Works Baudin is threatening to introduce a bill curtailing certain privileges which railroads now enjoy and finally compelling them to supply coaches in which all classes may be carried, on even the swiftest trains.

The Paris, Lyons & Mediterranean road inaugurated a new service today. Until now the fastest expresses carried only sleeping and parlor cars, one M. Baudin, arguing that as the railroads depended for their prosperity upon the whole population and that the poor man's time was just as precious to himself as a millionaire's to him, decreed that discrimination must cease.

The recent census shows that the population of Paris has increased 177,234 in the last five years and is now 2,714,698. These figures, representing only the legal population, are somewhat misleading. Paris has always the largest transient population of any city in the world, the average being estimated at 600,000. Besides, the great faubourgs outside the walls are as closely related to Paris as the Harlem quarter is to New York. Boulogne alone has 125,000 inhabitants, while the Leveville, Perret, Puteaux, Stouen, Pantin, St. Mande and Charbonnet quarters aggregate another million.

When new city limits are adopted next year Paris' population will be over 4,000,000.

The budget commission has effected certain changes in tax collections with an avowed purpose of gradually replacing the present system by a single income tax. Another interesting reform may be effected if Parliament passes M. Pellaton's bill nationalizing all insurances, life fire and marine. Incidentally this might lead to serious complications with the United States, as a large amount of French life insurance is being placed in American companies, which would surely resist expulsion from this exceedingly lucrative field.

Oliver Hobbes, otherwise Mrs. Craigie, has taken rooms in the Latin quarter for the purpose of getting a local color for her next novel, which will move in the same atmosphere as "The City."

Anna Held, accompanied by her husband, arrived today.

Arthur Pinero has returned to London. Melba was given a dinner by Jane Hading at which Mrs. Astor was present.

Paul Potter has returned from Switzerland.

Parisian Aristocracy Calls Down the Wrath of the People Whose Squalor It Invades.

Mrs. William Moore has recently had one of the party including the Countess Gandy, Mrs. Frank Gardner and Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt and Spencer Solly. Another crowd, comprising Mrs. General Porter, Mrs. Winslow, Lady Sarah Wilson and Miss Hedgerman Linden-rene with Rev. Mr. Morgan, General Winslow and Captain Dawson escorting went two days later. Some of the outcasts don't like this idle invasion of their quarter.

Mrs. Robert Gosler, Mrs. Ogden, Miss May Gosler and Mrs. Armour, with several gentlemen and two detectives, visited the sordid Rue Mouffetard and found Jean Grave, the famous anarchist, writing in his bare garret. He promptly ordered the party out, threatening to shoot even the detectives if they lingered.

Young Bradley tried to soothe the old writer, saying leltily: "Here, my man, take 5 francs and talk to us about your ideas and your schemes."

"I don't want your money," cried Jean, "and don't call me 'my man.' If you were not a fool you'd understand that you're patronizing an aged worker who has raised a family of ten children by manual labor and written twenty volumes to enlighten his brethren in unbecoming in a young cub like you, who have never given a thought to anything serious in life."

In the basement of another house—it was almost a cave—May Golet was roughly rebuked. Sniffing and gathering her skirts tightly about her she turned to the detective and said: "It smells awful here, let's go." Then to the washerwoman: "How can you stand such odors?"

"We stand it because we must, not because we like it," was the answer. "If you had been born in my place instead of your own it would be interesting to see how much better you would manage yourself with a sick mother and four children to support the product of your work. Moreover, we don't want to be eyed like wild animals by dantesque like you, coming under police protection. Get out—I am consumptive and so is my mother. Your precious lungs might catch it."

Miss Golet, when asked today what impression she brought back from her incursion among the poor, said to the World correspondent: "I am afraid it has saddened me for the rest of my days. I never dreamed that a portion of our kind were so completely denied everything that makes life tolerable. I wonder whether we have a right to eat these wasteful meals and enjoy the luxury of this hotel. With what I wasted each day by the guests at this place a hundred human beings might be redeemed from despair. These thoughts haunt me and spoil even a sunny day like this."
