FOCUSING RURAL KNOWLEDGE

Nebraska Has Advantage of Public School Consolidation.

HOW OTHER STATES HAVE BENEFITED

State Inventive Genius Attracts Labor Commission—Similarity of Names Involves Innocent Man—Three Lieutenants Dismissed.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LINCOLN, June 10.—(Special.)—According to reports received here, Superintendent Fowler's proposed plan of consolidating and centralizing rural schools is meeting with popular favor among business and school people of the state. Looked at from the standpoint of economy, the plan has many advantages and, as it has been successfully worked out in other states, among them Massachusetts, New York and Ohio, as well as many others, there is a general and growing impression that the same benefits might result were it tried in Nebraska. The eastern states whose schools are organized under the system utilize the rural route for transportation of pupils and wherever practicable the mail carriers drive the wagons that transport the pupils. Speaking of the advantages of centralizing the country schools, A. W. Edson, state agent for Massachusetts, says: "There is a decided tendency on the part of intelligent and progressive communities to close the small schools in remote districts and to transport children to the graded schools, better teaching and better grading are the result. This is done not so much from an economic standpoint, because of the firm conviction that the children receive greater educational advantages than in the small, ungraded schools. The number of children in the back districts is small and growing less every year. With few children and small classes there can be but little enthusiasm and progress."

The leading arguments in favor of the movement are: It permits a better grading of the schools and classification of the pupils. Consolidation allows pupils to be placed where they can be worked to the best advantage, the various subjects of study to be wisely selected and correlated and the best given. It affords an opportunity for thorough work in special branches, such as drawing, music and nature study. It opens the doors to more weeks of schooling and to schools of a higher grade. It ensures the employment and retention of better teachers. Teachers in small, ungraded schools are usually of limited education, training or experience or are past the age of competition. The salaries paid in cities and villages allow a wide range in the selection of teachers. It leads to better buildings and better equipment.

Several school districts near Lincoln have signified their willingness of trying the method if arrangements can be made for transporting the pupils. The Lincoln normal district, which adjoins the Lincoln district southeast of the city, is considering the plan and it is probably that matter will be brought up for formal discussion at the next meeting of the school directors of that district. The chief obstacle to be overcome is the transportation, but, as the legislature passed a law authorizing the district boards to provide means for sending the children back and forth from the schools, the question is greatly simplified.

Serious objection to Mr. Fowler's proposition comes from teachers in outlying schools, who would probably be affected by consolidation. Discontinuation of these schools would mean discontinuation of many of the teachers.

Governor Thomas on Lawyers.

Governor Charles S. Thomas of Colorado addressed the graduating students of the University of Nebraska college of law to-night on "The Modern Lawyer." The address was delivered in the Oliver theater, which was filled to its capacity, not withstanding the extreme sultriness of the evening.

Tomorrow morning the annual senior class play will be presented at the Oliver theater. At noon the Nebraska section of the Association of College Alumni will hold its annual meeting. The Board of Regents will meet for a business session at 4 o'clock. The university chorus concert in the evening at the Oliver theater will close the day's commencement events.

Inventive Genius of Nebraska.

Deputy Labor Commissioner Watson is collecting information and statistics concerning the inventive genius of Nebraska. Today he received a letter from the United States patent office, saying that 3,412 patents had been issued to Nebraska inventors up to January, 1901. It has been roughly estimated that seven-tenths of these were on inventions in farm machinery.

Wrong Man Accused.

Because of the similarity of names, Private C. E. Weaver of Company E, Second Regiment of the Nebraska National Guard, has been wrongfully accused of a serious breach of military discipline. Among the men who recently disobeyed the orders of their commanding officer at the state penitentiary was J. Weaver of Company E. In the transmission of the names and the confusion resulting from the similarity of the two names, an error was made and when the orders for a court-martial to hear the cases were issued by the adjutant general last week, C. E. Weaver was cited to appear for trial instead of J. A. Weaver.

Offender Discharged.

Adjutant General Colby today issued an order which reads as follows: "It appearing that the exigencies of the service do not require the addition of Battery A, light artillery, Nebraska National Guard, such increase to said organization is discontinued and all orders giving authority heretofore are hereby revoked to take effect June 17, 1901, the date of the expiration of the term of office of said officers." The officers who will be discharged under this order are Lieutenants Muddock, Jones and Yoder.
