More Difficult Than Ever.

This drill, while much like its predecessors from the standpoint of the grandstand, was really different in several essential points, and correspondingly more difficult. The rule preventing one company from viewing the work of another was this time rigidly enforced. There was no peaking to such a condition that he cannot cat through cracks in the fences, and no cadet weak-minded people who have not logical ceived the order. > Six Young Women Receive Diplomas from the Hands of Bishop Worthington.

Friday will go down as a memorable day in the annals of Brownell Hail, as it marked not only the closing of a term and the graduating of the first class of the new century, but the passing of the faculty has shaped the destinies of the school for many years. The goodbyes that were said between teacher and pupil had something more of significance than those of other commencement days. From the standpoint of the pupils it was saying farewell to an alma mater that will never be again as they had known it; to the teacher meant the breaking of friendship's ties and the making of new friends and new homes elsewhere. The day was especially favorable for commencement exercises in a young woman's school, being warm and bright, an ideal June day, in perfect sympathy with the profusion of flowers, the white gowns and dainty millinery.

The graduates were Misses Hope Hanchott, Minnie Storz, Lusie I. Robb, Luree Beemer, Laura M. Campbell and Vernice Cochran. The ceremonies were simple, consisting of addresses by Bishops Worthington and Williams and by Mrs. Louise R. Upton, the retiring principal. There were prayers, the chanting of the litany, a duet, instrumental music by pupils of the institution and finally Bishop Worthington bestowed his blessing upon the six young women who had received their degrees.

Pink Silks, Palms and Plants. The chapel was tastefully decorated for the occasion, pink silk being draped over chandeliers. Palms and potted plants were upon the stage.

At 11 o'clock the graduates took their places immediately in front of the stage. They were directoire gowns of white, with a pink ribbon about the neck. A few minites later Bishops Worthington and Williams, Dean Fair, Judge J. M. Woolworth and Herman Kountze took their places upon the stage. Every seat in the room was occupied, the pupils of the school, all dressed in white, sitting in the front rows. the benches in the rear being reserved for the friends and relatives of the graduates. At 12 o'clock the graduates stepped upon the stage, one at a time, and received their diplomas from Bishop Worthington. After

Tax Commissioner Fitzgerald expects to arches will be constructed in sections and complete the 1901 city assessment today. In view of this fact, Mayor Kelly is considering the advisability of calling a special session of the council for the purpose of appointing a board of review. According to the new charter, the mayor appoints and the council confirms a board of three citizens to listen to complaints and equalize the assessment. This board is paid $5 per day each for a session lasting not more than five days. At this rate the board will cost the taxpavers $125. As soon as the work of the commissioner completed an announcement of the fact will be made and the board will be called together and organize. On account of so little having been said about the board of review the mayor has not been bothered with applications for positions on the Certain citizens have suggested board. that H. M. Christie, T. J. O'Neil and B. E. Wilcox would make a splendid board, as all three are familiar with affairs in South Omaha and are conversant with values all over the city.

While Commissioner Fitzgerald has no figures to give out until his books are totaled, it is understood that the arsessment on the packing houses has been inreased $100,000 over that of last year. The three banks have also been rais d about $20,000. If other property has been assessed in proportion the total city valuation will reach at least $2,500,600. Water Bill Filed. Yesterday Charles Collins, local manager of the Omaha Water company, filed a bill with Clerk Shrigley for $6,078,34, being the rental due for fire hydrants from December 31, 1900, to June 30, 1901. Two hundred hydrants are charged for, at the rate of $60 the rostrum and festooned between the per year, which makes $6,000, three intermediate bydrants at $10 per year, $15, and two hydrants for six months and four days, $61.34, making the total mentioned. Just at the present time the water fund is overdrawn $11.60, so there is no immediate prospect of the bill being paid, unless the city goes into court and confesses judgment. When the annual levy is made nex month provision will be made for the pay ment of the water bills. On account of the large amount of building several miles of water mains have been laid within the last year or so and this extraord pary demand for hydrants and mains has caused the overlap in the water fund.
