COLLINS ORDERED

Manawa Injunction Sure Enough, but Isn't Cooked to Suit the Man Who Asked for One-Waiters' Union Waits.

The hearing of the application of H. T. Collins for a temporary injunction to restrain W. S. Balduff, caterer, from selling section hand and was formerly with the ing in the district court. Judge Wheeler was on the bench. Collins and his attorneys, Fremont Benjamin and George H. Gable, were present and everything was in readiness for the court to hear the application, when the defense sprung a surprise in the shape of an injunction issued by Judge Smith McPherson of the United States court restraining Collins, his attorneys or any of his associates from prosecuting the suit until the hearing for a permanent injunction could be had in the federal court, July 23.

The restraining order issued by Judge McPherson is a sweeping one. It not only enjoins Collins and his attorneys or any of their associates from prosecuting the suit at bar, but also restrains them from CITY COUNCIL SAYS PAVE instituting or prosecuting any other suit of a like character against Balduff.

Collins and his attorneys are also sev erally enjoined and restrained from in any manner, way, shape or form interfering with Balduff on his premises at Lake Manawa. The hearing of Collins' application for an injunction against Balduff was at once called off until such time as Balduff's suit in the federal court is disposed of.

Says It's Not in Good Faith.

Caterer Balduff, against whom a fight is being waged by the Waiters' union of Omaha, alleges that the action brought in the district court here by Collins and his attorneys, Fremont Benjamin and George H. The petition calls attention to the fact that no officer of the state of Iowa has taken part or been interested in the prosecution of the plaintiff and that places of like character are located and situated near and adjacent to the premises of the plaintiff at Lake Manawa, and that no prosecutions of any kind have been instituted against them. It further alleges that Collins and his associates have conspired together for the purpose of prostituting the laws and processes of the state of Iowa and have invoked the same to use against the plaintiff for their own mercenary and seuniary purposes and interests. Balduff asserts that if compelled to employ union waiters they would drive away his patrons, as he would have no control or authority over them. He further contends that the sections of the statutes covering the mulct laws are unconstitutional inasmuch as they operate to deprive

In the absence of Aldermen McDonald and Lougee last night the remaining six members of the city council got together on the paving question and a resolution providing for the improvement of the streets in the Fourth ward, which have been such a bone of contention, was adopted. Attorney John Lindt appeared before the council with a proposition to settle Henry Lock's claim for personal injuries by reason of an alleged defective sidewalk. Lock put in a claim for $5,250, claiming to have received a severe fall by a defective sidewalk at Broadway and Sixteenth street. Attorney Lindt offered to compromise the claim for $3,000. In describing his client's injuries Attorney Lindt said: "Mr. Lock's holders of property without due process of hand is in bad shape, his arm is in a very law and deny the equal protection of the bad shape, his back is in a terrible shape and his shoulder, well, that is in very bad shape also."
