We must rid ourselves of some wrong notions in regard to these South American people. Compliancelly resting under the untested and unchallenged Monroe doctrine, what have we, as a nation, ever done for the South American nations? They being borrowers, did we ever loan money to them? No, we left that to brighter and wiser minds of Europe, apparently quicker to grasp the great opportunities than ourselves. There being 20,000 miles of railroad, did we ever build any of it or bond it? No; again Europe stepped in and took the prize. As a matter of fact the railroad concessions granted to Americans were allowed to die or fell to men of greater wisdom and courage who carried the work onto fruition, not to ourselves. Not a single American dollar has gone into a bank, gas or water works or any other public and municipal improvement in all that great expanse of territory, all were left to the men of Europe.

Nor even, for a short time, were there any steamship lines from these ports to the South American ports, under the flag and control of this country. -Chris Harny, the prominent Ute, Ia. business man who mysteriously disappeared ecently after the sensational Harms-Palmer scandal, is dead by his own hand. His body was found last night in the Soldler river near Ute by boys who were fishing. It was badly decomposed and could be identified only by the clothing and personal belongings in the pockets. Harms evidently went directly to the river on the night of his disappearance, June 21 and drowned himself to avoid disgrace and ignominy. Harms was a prominent merchant at Ute who was accused by Richard Palmer, a banker, with having improper relations with the latter's wife. On the night of June 21, the two culprits were found together. Harms went home, but soon after left the house on some excuse and was not seen alive again.
