OMAHA AS AN AUTO TOWN

Merseless Carriages Not So Numerous Here as is Generally Supposed.

Nebraska's Capital City, So Local Dealers Say, Takes the Banner for Number and Style of Automobiles.

Among the most prayerful of those who] repair are the men who seek to conduct cording to the identity of the manufacturer. Omaha is not regarded as an automobile town. The use of this modern convenience and novelty in quick and easy transportation has not by any means become a craze In Omaha, as it has in most of the cities of the east and not a few western cities of progressive ideas.

The first autos that appeared in Omaha were designed for advertising purposes and were sailing under the colors of Messrs. Brahdeis and W. F. Stoecker. That was during the exposition epoch in Omaha. They appear to have passed out of service and such as are in use in the city now are plied to conserve the pleasure of their owners, just as any other vehicle would naturally be used. There are less than a dozen in operation here. Physicians seem for there are three of the members of the profession who are prepared to take their outings mounted upon these inanimate steeds. The fortunate ones are Dr. Anderson, Dr. Coulter and Dr. Straub, the latter being army physician at Fort Crook. Two of the men prominently connected with the Woodmen of the World, A. These are probably the only ones outside of the business who have invested in automobile of their goods to the public. One man who makes a business of selling the marchines, not only in Omaha, but in several adjacent clites, drives about the city almost does something in the way of selling autos, has a big $1,200 gasoline rig of Buffalo manufacture, with easts for four. "Lincoln has Omaha badly faded in the use of the automobile," says a dealer "There are about a dozen in active service down there, owned by private parties. W have two stores there and run a regular automobile stable. Lincoln is in advance even of Kansas City and St. Joseph in this evidence of progressiveness. Among those who own carriages in the Nebraska capital are F. Andrus, C. G. Crittenden, H. E. Foltz, Prof. A. A. Hadley of the Conservatory of Music, F. B. Packwood, C. R. Lee, E. R. Spencer, H. N. It was a little humiliating to hear an expert opinion on the relative merits of the pavements in Lincoln and Omaha. Two or three years ago Lincoln's principal business streets were in such a dilapidated condition that it was unsafe to cross one of them otherwise than in a balloon. It is so different now that dealers ascribe Lincoln's precedence in the use of the automobile over Omaha to the excellence of the pavements in that city and the reverse condition prevailing in Omaha. "There is no question," continued the dealer, "that there would be a better sale for the vehicles if the pavements were better here. Of course it is difficult to introduce a novelty such as the automobile but there is no good reason why Omaha should not take as readily to it as do the people of other western cities. Any expert mechanic who examines the mechanism of one of these machines will attest that the price asked is not exorbitant. They will not come down as bicycles did. The original prices on bicycles were so ridiculously high that they have suffered many reductions, but it will not be so with the locomobile. The boiler and engine of one of these machines must be made differently from any other boiler and engine, as they are made to be long to see Omaha pavements put in good placed in the hands of inexperienced persons. We claim that it does not take an the sale of the automobile, the locomobile engineer to run one. All that is needed is common sense. The boiler is of copper, wrapped with three layers of plano wire, so that it absolutely cannot explode." Most of the machines in operation in Omaha are propelled by steam, but there are some gasoline motors in use. Take a ride on the electric launches at Lake Manawa.

Here is a romance tempered by flames. Fire at Forty-sixth and Capitol avenue n Dundee Place, Friday destroyed the home of H. V. Salsbrun, with its contents. Salsbrun is a cigarmaker who for a time conducted a factory at Sixteenth and William streets. Some years ago he and his wife became estranged and a divorce followed. In the course of time when memory had one of the parties written by the other disconsolate one and a reconciliation followed. Having had experience in the matrimonial state before, and this experience having been with the prospective bride, the now happy cigarmaker prepared to welcome his two-time wife to a home of her liking. So he deserted the shop on Sixteenth street and removed his stock-in-trade and machinery to the suburban home, where he

He then left for Chicago, where for a second time he took for better or worse the woman of his double choice. A fire greeted their marriage and this fire consumed everything the bridegroom possessed. Today special agents of the United States revenue department are inspecting the ruins of the home to estimate what part of the tax paid by Salsbrun is to be returned to him.

HE'LL GET YOU, EF YOU DON'T WATCH OUT

Latest Development in the Book Agent Line-Canvassers Now a Better Class Than Formerly.

The book agent has made his appearance in a new form. He is well dressed and carries his stock with him in a suit case. His books are tales of travel and adventure, such as always interest boys, and when he comes to a place where a number of youngsters are at play he opens his case, shows the books, which are bound and illustrated to catch the fancy of the boy, and usually makes a sale.

"It is only natural that the book canvasser should break out in new style occasionally," said a large book publisher to a New York Tribune man, "for he has numerous and powerful competitors and he must be moving to keep up with the procession. The man selling books on the street is the only one of his kind today, but if his scheme is successful there will be others within a short time."

There has been much improvement in the composition of the book canvassing fraternity, according to the statements of the publishers, and the prejudice against the man who has a book for sale is growing less. "Of course," said one publisher, "it will be a long time before people will take down the signs in the hallways of public buildings excluding book agents, but it will take a long time to stop the mother-in-law jokes also. Book agents may have been bores and almost nuisances once upon a time, but the class has improved and the canvasser of today is usually a superior man, who combines the qualities of a salesman with more than average education. In the days when he was an objectionable visitor, who could not be insulted and who came in by one door after having been shown out of another, his earnings were small. Today the average canvasser makes publisher, "in which one can find more elderly men who have been unsuccessful than in the book canvassing line. But many of them get down to work harder when they enter than they ever did before, when they have something to put on the South Eleventh street Friday morning. It market they send for these men and agree on terms and know that the stock in question is as well as disposed of. The sign 'No Book Agents Allowed' has no terror for these people. They go to the office of a MIX busy lawyer or a Wall street broker with the assurance of a client or a customer; they are admitted, their story is listened to and they usually go away with an order. There are hundreds of busy men in New York who love books, and buy many, but never go to a book store. All their purchases are made through agents. They are known to the fraternity, but it would be useless for Brown to see a man to whom Jones usually sells, for these customers 'belong' to the book salesmen. We saw this demonstrated recently. A man who had a good trade gave it up to take a place in an insurance company. He turned his list over to another man who was a good salesman, and a man of good address, but the trade did not take to him, and his sales are nothing like those of his predecessor." The most conscientious book agent is the woman. She attends to her business closely condition of mind a letter was received by days of canvassing the woman who enand is usually successful. In the early gaged in the business thought it necessary to wear black, to have a tale of woe and to give her customers a chance to mix charity with business. That class of canvasser has grown less every year and it is now almost extinct. The woman canvasser of today is usually a bright, clever, and, in most instances, handsome woman, who makes customers, no matter what the qualcould manufacture cigars without departing The income of one of these women last ity of the book she is selling may beyear from commissions on books sold was more than $30,000.

> Living Down Prejudice. "The name of our calling is against us, said a man who is known as one of the successful sellers of subscription books to the fribune representative. "Having a good bo t for sale and knowing a man who battle, because some people have a prejudice against a book agent which is so strong that they will not admit one to the house. I sent my card to such a person and when the lady appeared and looked at me she said: 'You are not a book agent, are you?' " 'Do I look like a book agent?" "'Excuse me,' she said, apologetically, and then I began to talk about my book. 'I thought you said you were not a book agent.' "'No, I simply asked if I looked like one, and, according to your notion of such people, I did not."

"Well, I sold the woman my book and made a customer of her." The book agent who has a set of books on his hands which a customer refused to take, which he will sell for half price, the man who in order to "get a good name on his book" will sell a $100 work for $20 and the agent who will agree to throw in another book free of charge just to make a sale are among the people who make it hard for the better class of canvassers to do business.

I make no extravagant assertion when I say that millions of men have been wrecked on the rock of sexual vice. The trouble is not so much that they get disease, but rather that they allow it to grow worse through neglect or improper treatment. This fact is responsible in many cases for nine-tenths of the suffering.

But if you have VARICOCELE, STRICTURE, CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON, NERVO-SEXUAL DEBILITY, RUPTURE, KIDNEY OR URINARY DISEASES, or any associate disease or weakness, you owe it to yourself to fully and freely investigate my treatment. My mastery of these maindles is complete, I began a special study of them soon after graduating from college, now nearly a quarter of a century ago, and daring all of the years since then they have been my study and persistent practice. I treat nothing else.

Does it not occur to you, then, that I am better prepared to combat and conquer disease and weakness peculiar to men than the general practicioner, who, instead of concentrating his faculties on a single class of disease, scatters them over the entire field of medicine and surgery?

The police received word yesterday of the death of Kittie Owens at Spokane, Wash., July 13. Kittie, a comely mulatto, was well known in Omaha and in many other cities of the middle west as a pickpocket of unusual versatility and skill. Once during the Transmississippi exposition she robbed a man from Nebraska City of $1,200. He had just sold out a business enterprise in Nebraska City and had come to Omaha with the proceeds of the sale, intending to reinvest the money here, when his chance meeting with Kittle changed his plans and sent him to work by the month on a farm. The money was never recovered. A short time afterwards Kittle robbed concessionaire at the exposition grounds of $790. A part of this sum was represented by a $500-bill and the detectives thought that this fact would aid them in appre hending the thief, but they underestimated her astuteness. Instead of trying to have the bill changed here she sent an accomplice to Chicago with it, paying her $100 for the service.
