Three Views of Bartley

A MARTYR

Blair Pilot.

The imprisonment of a person who has committed no intentional wrong is one of the greatest outrages that can be conceived. For more than four years Joseph Bartley, ex-state treasurer, has languished behind prison bars for a crime he never committed, and for the sole reason, not that justice should be satisfied, but that political capital might be made out of his alleged misdeeds. If the true history of the Bartley case were written it would give Mr. Bartley a much different standing in public esteem than he now enjoys. It is no secret that he made use of the funds to arrest the progress of a blighting panic which at that time threatened the life savings of hundreds of citizens and bid fair to drive many banks and business houses to the wall. Had he been successful in tiding over and had been the means of preventing commercial failures too much praise could not have been given. But, like many other well meaning men who suffered bitter sacrifices and reverses, he miscalculated the length and breadth of the financial disturbance, which, as every one will remember...

A PHILANTHROPIST

(Omaha World-Herald.)

Governor Savage's act of mercy toward Joseph S. Bartley will naturally meet with some criticism. But with the understanding that Bartley is to be given an opportunity to realize upon his investments and thus be able to make to the state at least partial restitution, Governor Savage's action will meet with general commendation. As a general proposition it would be well if executive clemency were shown more frequently than it is. The law providing for the punishment of men guilty of transgression of the law was not intended to crush out of existence the man who made a mistake. It was not intended to completely destroy the faithful wife and the helpless children of that man. In fact, that law was not intended so much as a punishment to the transgressor as it was a lesson to society. When an executive throws open the prison doors to one who does not belong to the criminal classes he does no injury to society. Who was there in all this state that could seriously object to the pardon of Henry Bollin? And yet there was criticism of Bollin's pardon. That old man had suffered untold agonies. His innocent family had suffered with him. Nothing that the law could do, nothing that additional punishment could effect would be able to make the man or his family suffer more than he and they had already suffered. They had drained the dregs of the cup that was pressed upon their lips and when Governor Dietrich threw open the prison doors to Henry Bollin he did an act of mercy that entitled him to the thanks and the commendation of all men. This thing of condemning our unfortunate fellow creature, simply because he has committed one or two errors, to punishment that knows no relenting—to a fate...

A ROBBER

Omaha Examiner.

Joe Bartley, who went out of the office of state treasurer leaving the treasury short $355,000, of which $337,000 came out of the funds sacredly set apart for the education of the children of the state, is a free man by the grace of Governor Savage's leniency. He was sentenced to serve twenty years after having been convicted by a jury of his peers. Governor Savage has paroled him for a period of sixty days, ostensibly upon conditions which are just now the subject of varying popular conjecture. The governor has not indicated what the conditions may prove to be, and while it is to be inferred that a failure to fulfill the conditions within sixty days will result in Bartley's return to the penitentiary at the end of that time, the governor has not said so. On the contrary, it is known that Governor Savage has long entertained a great deal of sympathy for Bartley, and as the executive has stated that his parole proposition was an adventure of his own devising, there is reason to believe that Bartley's parole is nothing more nor less than an absolute pardon, made in this manner, by easy stages, as it were, to defeat the indignant criticism that would certainly have followed an announcement of a pardon at once. But what about the justice of the act? In the dark days of 1898, just when the people of Nebraska were in a condition of abject poverty from distressing drought, added to the most trying and pinching national depression ever experienced in this country, they were startled by the discovery that the man to whom they had entrusted the sacred resources of their commonwealth had either despoiled the treasury himself or allowed it to be despoiled by others. An enormous sum of money, wrung from their straitened resources at a time when, of all their career in the state, they were least able to spare it, had been looted. The worst of it all is that although Bartley was tried and convicted, the public, who lost the money, has never obtained the slightest inkling of what became of it. If Bartley had dealt fairly by the people he would have told what he had done with the money committed to his care by a trusting public. He did not tell, but on the contrary...

SOUTHERNERS ARE HOT HEADED

Attempt to Remove Ex-Governor Jones from Constitutional Convention Causes Scene.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 20.—An exciting scene occurred at noon today in the constitutional convention over the introduction, discussion and disposal of a resolution protesting against free passes being accepted by any state officer. Former Governor Jones protested against the tabling of the resolution and appealed from the decision of the chair. A controversy between President Knox and Mr. Jones ensued and the president directed the sergeant-at-arms to seat the ex-governor. Mr. Jones demurred, but the chair insisted on his being seated, and amid great excitement directed the sergeant-at-arms to remove Mr. Jones from the hall. Mr. Jones passionately exclaimed: "If anyone attempts it, it will be done over my dead body." The disorder in the hall became general. The former governor exclaimed: "I have a right to know if the chair will put my name on the list." Chairman Knox replied: "The chair sits down and the chair began to state the question. He was interrupted by Mr. Jones and the chair once more requested him to be seated. He further directed the sergeant-at-arms to execute the order. As the sergeant-at-arms approached Mr. Jones...

COUNTY TREASURER SHORT

State Attorney General of Ohio Holds Charles Brumfield Responsible for Tax Shortage.

COLUMBUS, O., July 20.—Attorney General Sheets, in an opinion sent to State Auditor Gilbert, holds Charles Brumfield, treasurer of Richland county, responsible for an apparent large shortage in the tax fund. The attorney general finds that $35,000 back taxes collected from the Aultmans & Taylor Machine company of Mansfield should be charged in full to the county treasurer. He rules that the attorneys in the cases, which were compromised in the courts, had no authority to retain any sum whatever of the whatever of the "The Mansfield, O., July 20.—A sensation was sprung here today when Alfred Blackburn of Steubenville, expert accountant, on the order of the auditor of state, appeared at the office of County Treasurer Charles Brumfield and demanded that the office be turned over to him. Blackburn is now in charge.

Indian Killed in Fight.

SIRESTON, S. D., July 20.—Solomon, an Indian, was shot and killed by Charles L. Hall near the Minnesota state line last evening. Hall was camped on land which belonged to the dead Indian. Sireston, with other Indians, ordered Hall to move on. Hot words ensued and a general fight resulted. Hall saved himself by the defense's jury today returned a verdict of self-defense.

of the fusionists to make political capital resulted in his arrest, and Bartley was made a defaulter—when his intentions were to make good every penny. There never was, therefore, any occasion or just cause for Joseph Bartley's arrest, and his incarceration for four years in the penitentiary as a convict is one of the most shameful outrages ever committed in the name of justice. It is high time that the wrong done him be corrected. The Pilot believes it speaks the sentiment of a very large majority of the people of this state when it says that this almost tragic scene should close and Joseph Bartley be given a free and unconditional pardon. No governor certainly not so good and kind as is Earl P. Savage can afford to countenance a continuation of this embargo on justice. Even in the days of kings some attention was paid to human rights, and it is hoped that the steps of organized society in this respect have been forward instead of backward.

brave enough to show clemency to this unfortunate man. Is it necessary that the heart of the mother and the children should be pounded into pulp in order that the vengeance of a thing called "society" shall be appeased? Is this necessary either in the case of "Joe" Bartley or in the case of many men now confined in the state's prison? The men who should be confined permanently in prison for any considerable length of time are the men who are naturally and habitually criminal. No injury is done society, or to the unhappy man who becomes the beneficiary of that clemency, when the prison doors are opened to the unfortunate who has made one mistake. Governor Savage need not be alarmed because there are a number of people who criticize him for his act of kindness and mercy. No serious injury was ever committed by a man whose offense was that he yielded to generous impulses and made happy a family that for a considerable period had suffered more than words can describe. "The quality of mercy is not strained; it droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven upon the place beneath; it is twice blessed; it blesseth him that gives and him that takes; 'tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes the throned monarch better than his crown; his scepter shows the force of temporal power, the attribute to awe and majesty, wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings; but mercy is above this scepter's sway; it is enthroned in the heart of kings; it is an attribute of God Himself; and earthly power doth show the likeness of God's when mercy seasons justice."

In extending mercy to "Joe" Bartley Governor Savage acted wisely. Time will justify his brave and generous deed.

tution. In their moments of resentment against him for his magnificent theft, those most bitter against him have done him the favor to suppose that he had been dragged into ruin, criminally it is true, but through confidence in unworthy friends, and that he may have been more sinned against than sinning. They did him the charity to suppose that possibly all of the money was gone irretrievably from his possession and reach through his generous weakness rather than through criminal avarice. Should he now come forward with this $200,000, all charitable theories as to his inability to restore his stealing will at once be exploded and his absolute villainy will be exposed. And if he makes restitution of $200,000 who will know that he has not the greater part of the other $355,000 stowed safely away as profits of his dishonesty? Why should not Governor Savage, before entertaining for a moment a thought of Bartley's liberation, require him to submit an itemized statement, subject to proof, showing what became of every dollar he does not return?

Another intimation is that Bartley is to make a statement implicating others. There was a time when such a statement might have been of value to the public. It was when it would have been possible for the state to have recovered from such others, if any there were, as has profited from the robbery of the treasury. But that time is past and it will not escape notice that the threat of a disclosure of the identity of such parties by Bartley comes just at a time when the statute of limitations has set in as a bar to recovery from them by the state. There are but two conclusions reasonably possible in this recent shameful Bartley fiasco. One is that Governor Savage has been hoodwinked or sandbagged by the man who has been paid by Bartley with state funds to restore his stolen money. The other is that he has lent himself to a miserable pretense to hoodwink or sandbag the despoiled citizenship of Nebraska. Whatever Joe Bartley may do in the line predicted will only the more fully expose the infamy of his crime and the state can ill afford to see such villainy condoned for a paltry $200,000.

SERVING BERRIES IN SEASON.

Delicious Dishes in Natural State and in Combinations.

There are so many delightful ways of using and serving berries when they are in season one is tempted to have them at every meal, and one may do so without fear that the family will complain of monotony, especially the children, who seem akin to the birds in love for wine and tree foods. The preferred method of serving them is, of course, as a natural but their delicious juices add so much to many other food substances they may be enjoyed in various combinations. A few of these may help the housewife solve the problem of presenting new tempting dishes to appetites made critical and indifferent by midsummer heat. Serve uncooked ripe fruit for breakfast when it is possible to get it perfectly ripe and in best condition. Fruit intended to be served in this way must be as fresh from the vine or tree as possible, and not over-ripe or showing the slightest decay, as in this case it is very liable to cause considerable trouble in the digestive tract from fermentation or decomposition. Children are too frequently made ill in summer by allowing them to eat fruit in a unit quantity. Fruit to be served raw should never be allowed to stand in a warm or damp place after it is gathered; this applies particularly to the soft berries. Fruit must be thoroughly cleaned, and such fruits as cherries, currants and grapes can be washed without detracting from their flavor and freshness. Three points must be observed in serving the raw fruit; first, it must be ripe; second, free from any indications of decay or fermentation, and last, but not least, to enhance the enjoyment of this delightful gift of nature it must be served ice-cold. A suggestion of green adds greatly to the enjoyment of the fruit.

Berry Dishes for Breakfast.

One of the nicest ways of serving cooked blackberries for breakfast is to make them into "mummy." This can be chilled in individual moulds and served with cream, plain or whipped, as desired, and moistened by pouring over it a little boiling water, covering and stewing until soft, but not broken, then cold, rich cream poured over it and a slice of "blackberry" mush placed on top makes a very delicious breakfast dish. The biscuit may be split and the fruit placed between like a sandwich and whipped cream heaped over the top. Fresh ripe berries of all kinds may be served in the same manner. Blackberry Plumery—Cover a pint of ripe berries with a quart of water and cook gently in a double boiler for ten minutes. Mix four level tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with a little cold water and stir into the berries and cook until it thickens; sweeten to taste and stir until sugar is dissolved; cook for a few minutes and remove from the fire and turn out into a bowl. The berries should retain their shape and the jelly be quite clear. Blackberry Mush—Make the same as the above, but cook the fruit a little longer and put through a sieve to remove the seeds. Make it stiff enough to cut by adding a tablespoonful of cornstarch instead of four. Blueberry Cakes—These are nice for breakfast or lunch. Measure three cups of sifted flour, add three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a heaping tablespoonful of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt; sift well together. Beat one egg until light; add 1 1/2 cups of milk. Make a well in the center of the flour and gradually pour in the liquid, stirring in the flour. In this way you can keep the batter smooth. Make its consistency of cake batter. Melt two level tablespoonfuls of butter and add to the batter; then two cups of flour and blueberries. Bake in little custard cups or muffin rings, allowing a little longer time than for plum muffins. Blackberries are nice used in this way. Old-Fashioned Strawberry Pie—Pick over, wash and drain a quart of berries; when quite dry dredge them with flour. Measure four cups of sifted flour, add a teaspoonful of salt, four level teaspoonfuls of baking powder and sift again; rub into the flour a small amount of malleable lard, half a cup of butter; add the berries; mix well; then mix in enough milk to make a soft dough that will spread, but not run in the pan; heat a tablespoonful of butter in the iron spider (frying pan), put in the cake; the pan must be large enough to make the cake three-quarters of an inch thick, so it over a moderate fire to bake slowly for about twenty minutes, allowing ten minutes for each side; shake the pan about and turn the cake to prevent its burning; serve as soon as done. Split open, do not cut, and use plenty of good butter. Strawberry Tapioca—Chill a plain glass fruit dish; cut large strawberries in half, dip the cut side into a little dissolved gelatin and arrange a double row of the halves down the side of the dish; then place a thin, lengthwise slice of banana next; then another double row of berries, and so on until your dish is lined; cook a quart of fine, ripe berries in a cup of water and two-thirds of a cup of sugar until berries are softened; flavor with a little lemon juice and stick cinnamon; stir into the hot berries two tablespoonfuls of granulated tapioca and cook until tapioca is clear; take from the fire; fold in carefully the whites of two eggs beaten to a stiff froth; when rather cool pour slowly into the fruit-lined dish; set on ice to chill, and when ready to serve heap whipped, sweetened cream on top, decorated with whole berries, dust with powdered sugar and serve.

Raspberry and Currant Souffle—This is nice for a little luncheon party or afternoon tea. Mix together three cups of red raspberry and one cup of red currant pulp; make quite sweet and stir on ice to chill; mix a pint of sweet, rich cream very thick and dry and pack in ice and salt to chill thoroughly, but not freeze; when ready to serve mix the fruit pulp and cream lightly together and serve at once. Strawberries and bananas may be used; flavor with a little lemon juice. Berry Dumplings—Beat two eggs very light, with two level tablespoonfuls of butter and two of sugar; add half a pint of milk; sift two cups of flour with two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a pinch of salt; add the flour to other materials and beat to a smooth, thick batter, adding more flour if quantity given is not sufficient; have a cup of strawberries or blackberries washed, drained and floured and add to the batter; drop this batter by the spoonful and few at a time into a kettle of boiling salted water; cover closely and boil for fully ten minutes. When done serve at once with orange hard sauce. Orange Hard Sauce—Beat two ounces of butter to a cream with one cup of powdered sugar; then work in gradually one egg yolk, the juice of an orange, a little grated nutmeg and two tablespoonfuls of brandy or sherry, if you use wine; last of all add the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Set on ice to harden. Raspberry and Currant Mould—Stem and wash quarter of a pound of red currants; add to three-quarters of a pound of red raspberries which have been washed and drained; add half a cup of water and cook until softened; then press through a sieve; add sufficient sugar to sweeten to taste; return to fire; add half a package of gelatin which has been dissolved in a cup of cold water; stir until the gelatin and sugar are dissolved in the fruit; take from the fire and set in a pan of cracked ice; stir until it begins to thicken, then add a cup of whipped cream; pour into a wetted mould and set on ice to stiffen; cream may be omitted from

TEMPTATION TONIC

The World's Greatest Ideal French Tonic, Stimulator, Invigorator.

From The Journal of Health, Washington, D. C., Sept. 10, 1900

WONDERFUL DISCOVERY THAT WILL INTEREST THE MEDICAL PROFESSION AND THE PUBLIC.

An Elixir of Life, known as TEMPTATION TONIC, discovered by Dr. J. DeFouk of Paris, and said to be infinitely superior in its rejuvenating effects to the waters from Ponce de Leon's Fountain of Youth, has found its way into this country. Mr. George S. Baron, of New York City, said: Several weeks before I sailed for Paris I heard that a personal friend of mine, and his wife, who had been abroad, had been treated successfully by the Paris physician, so I wrote him a letter and asked him for particulars. He answered, testifying to his wonderful improvement, and says he feels like a giant refreshed from slumber.

Mr. Baron says: "When I went to Paris I was somewhat enfeebled in body. I put myself upon the treatment of Temptation Tonic under the care of Dr. DeFouk who administered to me in all twelve bottles of the tonic, and in the end I was certainly very much improved in health. I gained seven pounds in weight, and began feeling a sense of exhilaration and renewed vitality."

The only genuine imported French Tonic and positive remedy for Lost Manhood, Unfitness to Marry, Sexual Debility and Impotency. TEMPTATION TONIC has effected cures in either sex where all other known treatments have failed.

TEMPTATION TONIC has long enjoyed the reputation as a tonic for men and women of weakened vitality. It is attributed to the use of this tonic that the old inhabitants of Egypt lived to the age of ninety and one-hundred and twenty-five years, cases being known of some men and women having children after having passed the age of ninety years.

Compounded by L. M. LAGAARD, Paris, France.
