

THE OMAHA SUNDAY BEE

E. ROBEWATER, EDITOR. PUBLISHED EVERY MORNING.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION: Daily Bee (without Sunday), One Year, $4.00; Six Months, $2.50; Three Months, $1.50.

ADVERTISING: Communications, notices and editorial matter should be addressed to the Editor, Omaha, Neb., at the Bee Publishing Company.

REMITTANCES: Remit by draft, express or postal order, payable to the Bee Publishing Company.

STATEMENT OF CIRCULATION: State of Nebraska, Douglas County, ss. I, George B. Tschuck, secretary of the Bee Publishing Company, being duly sworn, say that the actual number of full and complete copies of the Daily Morning Bee and Sunday Bee printed during the month of June, 1901, was as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Copies, Total. Rows include Daily Bee, Sunday Bee, and Total.

Net total sales, 106,171. Net daily average, 35,376.

GEORGE B. TSCHUCK, Secretary of the Bee Publishing Company.

PARTIES LEAVING FOR SUMMER: Parties leaving the city for the summer may have the Bee sent to them regularly by notifying the Bee Business Office.

The month of July will end its career this week with more than the usual blare of glory distinction.

Old Sol should remember that "A Hot Time" has been worn out and is no longer a popular favorite.

Nothing less than the title of admiral or rear admiral will open up a seat on the naval inquiry board.

The question is, How much proof of penitence is going to be required to have the scourge of heat and drought called off for good?

The new Maline has been launched. When it is completed it is to be hoped it will not kick up another war by getting itself blown up.

Having been officially read out of the democratic party, Senator McLanahan might find solace by making a pilgrimage to the shrine of Grover Cleveland.

City Treasurer Hennings will soon be able to fit people out on all stages of the journey from the cradle to the grave.

The performance of Chevrolet, the trotting wonder, in going a mile in 2:02 1/2, will revive talk of the two-minute trotter.

General DeWalt has received a few fever rags during the last few days, but gives no indication of letting go until forced. Like a hero, he goes as often as he has to give up.

The national bank statements made in response to the recent call of the comptroller disclose satisfactory financial conditions in every section of the country.

When the railroad syndicates get matters in hand so they can control rate-making and divide by the traffic, arrangements for which are now under way, the suffering thought agent will be able to see his kind.

The new Shamrock has started on its trip after the American cup. The people of this country certainly wish for Thomas Lipton, the owner, a pleasant time and a good race, but they cannot spare the cup, because it is a keepsake in the family.

The British Parliament proposes to present King Edward to assume any title he may elect at the time of his coronation. If he allows any other recognition to possess a longer or more high-sounding name than himself there will be no use in his name.

General Wood has sufficiently approved from his recent efforts to ask for the United States, and all will wish him a speedy recovery of his mental health.

The United States has been possessing a fortune in the selection of the new president in China both before and since the war, and it is more than a little doubtful.

The Spanish commercial bodies in Manila object to the American plan of governing the city. The Spanish authorities have the government's approval, some of the people who allowed them to govern the port, and it is a pity that they should object to a system which promises to sever the ties of their commercial and industrial dependencies.

HOW FAR SHALL COURTS INTERFERE?

The great steelworkers' strike now in progress in Pennsylvania and Ohio again directs public attention to the extraordinary powers which courts have been invoked to exercise for the protection of factory owners and repression of factory workers.

Federal and state courts are issuing injunctions against pickets established in the vicinity of mills and factories. These injunctions are not issued on the ground that irreparable injury to property is feared, but on the plea that the strike picket is a nuisance in the neighborhood.

Picketing has been legally defined as "posting persons at all the approaches to a place where a strike is in progress for the purpose of reporting the workmen going to or coming from the works and using such influence as may be in their power to prevent the workmen from accepting employment there."

In England picketing was at one time held illegal by the courts, but has since by statute been expressly permitted. The very fact that the British Parliament has by statutory enactment legalized picketing justifies the conclusion that the interference of the courts with workmen who are peacefully endeavoring to persuade other workmen to abstain from accepting employment or to join a trade union is a dangerous exercise of judicial power.

On this point the current issue of the Outlook strikes the nail on the head when it says: "To forbid a workman from using peaceful persuasion to induce another workman not to accept employment in a certain factory or mill appears to us a clear violation of the fundamental rights of free speech and a clear assumption of dangerous authority by the courts. It is an equality with that of an injunction issued by a court of equity against acts which are evidently criminal, such as the use of personal violence by one workman against another workman."

The objection to the usurpation of such authority by courts of equity is that the violation of an injunction is a contempt of court and the person who is charged with contempt of court is tried by the judge who issues the injunction. It ought not to be permissible for the same judge to issue the injunction, try the defendant, render the verdict and pronounce the sentence in a criminal case. We should be glad to see congress enact a law providing that in all cases for contempt of court for violation of injunction or other orders of the court, or perhaps for any act not performed in the presence of the court, the defendant should be entitled to demand a trial by jury before some other judge than the one who issued the order which has been violated.

The history of England indicates the reality of the danger which may be apprehended from the usurpation of legislative authority by judicial officers.

This is a clear enunciation of the principle involved in proceedings that subject American citizens to punishment for constructive contempt and nowhere has this been more clearly demonstrated than in Nebraska, where the exercise of this royal prerogative has been carried even further than it has, perhaps in any other state of the union, although not exactly in the line of injunctive preventing picketing, but to prevent the free discussion of judicial proceedings by the press.

How far the judges of Ohio and Pennsylvania will go with their restraining orders and injunctions remains to be seen. If, for example, 10,000 of the workmen employed in one or more of the mills should violate an order of the court to refrain from walking on picketed thoroughfares and singing union labor songs would not the courts find themselves utterly incapable of enforcing their orders without converting themselves and workmen into jailbirds?

THE NEW GERMAN TARIFF: American agricultural interests will be unfavorably affected to an especial degree by the new German tariff, should it become law. The Associated Press reports from Berlin states that opinion in commercial circles there is that the American subsidies are monstrous, involving a great burden for Germany's industrial and commercial classes, together with a serious injury to foreign trade, tariff wars and hindrances to commercial treaties. It is also said that Americans in business in Berlin regard the matter as exceedingly bad for Germany and the United States.

The measure has caused no little excitement in Germany, which is likely to be increased when it is taken up for legislative action. Those who are opposed to higher duties admit that they have been deceived as to the intentions of the government, while it is said that the agitators themselves are surprised at the concessions made to them. They are apprehensive that they have been offered too much and that the result will be such a popular protest against the proposed duties that they will have to be drastically reduced, possibly below what the agitators desire. The measure provides the maximum and minimum rates and the maximum rates are to be applied to American products. While this cannot perhaps be fairly regarded as discrimination, since the same rates may be applied to the products of other countries, it yet would furnish a possible reason for retaliation. It is not impossible that the motive of the German government in the matter is to force the United States into a reciprocity agreement, though this is certainly not what the agitators want. So far as they are concerned a tariff war would doubtless be welcome.

At all events the proposed new tariff is not in the interest of close commercial relations between Germany and the United States and while, if it should be put into effect, it would result in more or less injury to the United States, it is a tariff which would suffer equally as much or more than this. What greatly distressed comes never sufficient to supply the huge demand and industrial depression is a more unfavorable one than the ultimate to increase the duties on foodstuffs. Under such circumstances the policy should rather be to lower duties. The situation is such as to warrant the belief that the proposed tariff will not be approved by the legislative bodies. There are very strong indications of a popular demonstration to oppose in the United States the proposed duties on the agitators. The great body of consumers, there is good reason to believe, will not complacently accept a policy which means scarcer and dearer foodstuffs, however much it might benefit the great land owners who are agitating for higher duties on agricultural products.

This popular opposition to the new tariff is already pronounced, but it will be much more so, there can be no doubt, and the government will hardly venture to ignore it.

It is remarked that the controversy over the German tariff bill reveals the extreme difficulty of uniting Europe in a commercial warfare against the United States. While there continues to be talk of such a pan-European movement, emanating principally from Vienna, its impracticability is generally recognized. It possesses an interest, however, as a symptom of the jealousy of the growing commercial power of the United States.

END OF NEGOTIATIONS NEAR: The American commissioner at Peking has notified the Department of State that negotiations at Peking will close within two weeks with a signatory protocol by all of the powers. The important matter of agreeing upon a plan for paying the indemnity was settled two days ago, when the representatives of the powers accepted the proposition submitted by the Chinese government. This provides for the payment of the entire indemnity in forty years, with interest, the total amounting to a thousand million dollars, between $800,000,000 and $1,000,000,000. The details of the plan are not reported, but it is to be presumed there will be an increase in customs duties and some change in internal taxation.

The chief matters still to be disposed of relate to commercial arrangements and guarantees for the preservation of life and property of foreigners in the Chinese empire. As to these no difficulty is expected. Undoubtedly the Chinese government is prepared to enter into any commercial agreement which will be satisfactory to the powers and also to give them any reasonable guarantees they may require. It is safe to predict that if there is any delay in disposing of the remaining subjects of negotiation it will be due to disagreements among the powers and not to China. The Chinese government has all along shown an eager desire to effect a settlement, so that it might resume its functions without restriction or restraint, and it can be relied upon to do nothing now to delay a settlement. It is noteworthy that after all the haggling of the powers in regard to the payment of the indemnity it remained for the Chinese authorities to solve the question.

MORE THAN 10,000 letters mailed at the local delivery at Chicago are sent to the dead letter office at Washington every month. The postmaster of Chicago, who by the way has only been in the office a few months, has ventured to suggest to the postmaster general that the dead letter office at Washington be decentralized by the establishment of a branch dead letter office in all the principal postoffices of the country. We doubt very much whether the suggestion will meet with favorable consideration. There is no saving to be effected by the scheme, but on the contrary it would involve greater outlay than is now incurred by the government. While it might enable the postmaster general to do away with a small part of the force employed in the dead letter office it would involve the employment of additional clerks in every important postoffice that would be designated as a branch office and could not possibly be offset by the saving on pound rates paid by the government for the transportation of dead letters.

THE BEE MAKES NO acknowledgment to Richard Harding Davis for the comment bestowed in connecting with this paper the hero of his charming story that heads the literary page of the current number of Scribner's Magazine under the title "The Detective." The story portrays a picture of progress, self-reliance and devotion to duty typified in the newspaper man who after being trained and seasoned in the west drifts east to the city. The fact that eastern journalism is nearly everywhere infused with graduates of western papers like The Bee is the best proof of the variety and character of the western newspaper. Mr. Davis' "Detective" ranks with the best newspaper stories and his newspaper stories show him to his best advantage.

A new insurance company has just been formed in France that will take the risk in the failure of candidates in the French national assembly or other elective offices. If the novel insurance scheme proves a success in France it certainly would find a much wider and more profitable field in the United States, where elections are so frequent and defeated candidates may be numbered by the hundreds of thousands every year.

Governor Savage is being prodded by the Lincoln managers because he did not participate in the race for governor held by virtue of his proclamation. This recalls a story from 1892. Some years ago the state of Nevada was a vast to the realm of Queen Victoria and a court day was given in his honor. When asked to participate in the day he was generous. "We do not dance," exclaimed the indignant chief. "We live our lives."

The amount of tax payments to be returned under the Pure Food bill exceeds $100,000,000. As the consumer has in all probability paid the duties back to the importer in the purchase price, this will make a new little windfall for somebody although Christmas presents are not due for some months yet.

Commissioner Rockwell announces that the settlement of Chilean affairs will be accomplished within two weeks. The commissioner possibly thinks the intensions have exhausted their ability to kick over the traces, but they have been shown remarkable staying power.

litical ring that has many ramifications—hence these tears.

Mr. Bryan emphatically declares that "imperialism is still the great issue between the two political parties." In this the twice-defeated leader of the popocrats has reference to the exercise of American sovereignty in the Philippines and implies that democrats as a whole are not favorable to the policy of this government toward the Filipinos. Unquestionably there are some democrats who do not approve that policy, but there are also some who do.

It will hardly be questioned that the Chicago Chronicle is a trustworthy exponent of democratic opinion. In its issue of last Friday that paper, referring to the recent revelations of the Filipino Junta at Hong Kong, showing the encouragement given the insurgents by American "anti-imperialists," said: "There will be no revolution in American politics which would result in conferring independence on the people of the Philippines. No political change in the United States will cause the least relaxation in the methods of war directed against the Filipino factions still in arms against United States authority. If the democrats should carry the next presidential election and should elect a majority to both houses of congress the Philippines would not be abandoned. Filipino independence under United States protection would not be realized. The Philippines will be held in some way under adequate legislation by congress on the lines of the late decision of the federal supreme court." This expresses the view of many thousands of democrats in the north, while in the south the number of democrats opposed to the policy of the government toward the Philippines is extremely small. The most influential southern papers are unqualifiedly in favor of the retention of the archipelago and its government on the lines of the supreme court decision. We do not know of a single leading democratic paper in the south that advocates giving the Filipinos independence and a majority of the democratic senators and representatives from that section would not, it is safe to say, support a proposition to grant the Filipinos independence.

Mr. Bryan is not in touch in this matter, with a very large element of the party he assumes to represent. His harping on imperialism gets no sympathetic response from hundreds of thousands of the more intelligent democrats, who know there is no imperialism and will be none in our government of the Philippines.

More than 10,000 letters mailed at the local delivery at Chicago are sent to the dead letter office at Washington every month. The postmaster of Chicago, who by the way has only been in the office a few months, has ventured to suggest to the postmaster general that the dead letter office at Washington be decentralized by the establishment of a branch dead letter office in all the principal postoffices of the country. We doubt very much whether the suggestion will meet with favorable consideration. There is no saving to be effected by the scheme, but on the contrary it would involve greater outlay than is now incurred by the government. While it might enable the postmaster general to do away with a small part of the force employed in the dead letter office it would involve the employment of additional clerks in every important postoffice that would be designated as a branch office and could not possibly be offset by the saving on pound rates paid by the government for the transportation of dead letters.

THE BEE MAKES NO acknowledgment to Richard Harding Davis for the comment bestowed in connecting with this paper the hero of his charming story that heads the literary page of the current number of Scribner's Magazine under the title "The Detective." The story portrays a picture of progress, self-reliance and devotion to duty typified in the newspaper man who after being trained and seasoned in the west drifts east to the city. The fact that eastern journalism is nearly everywhere infused with graduates of western papers like The Bee is the best proof of the variety and character of the western newspaper. Mr. Davis' "Detective" ranks with the best newspaper stories and his newspaper stories show him to his best advantage.

A new insurance company has just been formed in France that will take the risk in the failure of candidates in the French national assembly or other elective offices. If the novel insurance scheme proves a success in France it certainly would find a much wider and more profitable field in the United States, where elections are so frequent and defeated candidates may be numbered by the hundreds of thousands every year.

Governor Savage is being prodded by the Lincoln managers because he did not participate in the race for governor held by virtue of his proclamation. This recalls a story from 1892. Some years ago the state of Nevada was a vast to the realm of Queen Victoria and a court day was given in his honor. When asked to participate in the day he was generous. "We do not dance," exclaimed the indignant chief. "We live our lives."

The amount of tax payments to be returned under the Pure Food bill exceeds $100,000,000. As the consumer has in all probability paid the duties back to the importer in the purchase price, this will make a new little windfall for somebody although Christmas presents are not due for some months yet.

Commissioner Rockwell announces that the settlement of Chilean affairs will be accomplished within two weeks. The commissioner possibly thinks the intensions have exhausted their ability to kick over the traces, but they have been shown remarkable staying power.

SECULAR SHOTS AT THE PULPIT.

Baltimore American: A Denver preacher announces that we are very near to the next world. He should not grow pessimistic because of the heat.

Washington Star: The Omaha pastor who issued a rule that women shall remove their hats upon entering pews in his church evidently wants to discourage the church-going habit among women.

Detroit Free Press: Faith is everything. The pastor of a church invited his congregation to invoke a blessing of rain went to church with an umbrella when the heavens were as clear as a bell and he started against a driving deluge when he hoisted for home. Our hope is that our westerers did not overdo the thing recently when they appealed from the weather department.

Minneapolis Times: Rev. Francis E. Clark, at the head of the Christian Endeavorers, proposes a church trust. His idea is that the future of an even more modest with much opposition, but it has a great deal of sound logic about it. There are plenty of people inside the churches who will agree with his view that one of the chief causes of the failure of several fields of different creeds will accomplish more good than the scattered ones could. It takes more than several swallows to make a summer, however, and it is not likely that Dr. Clark's idea will be general for a time yet.

The Tilden club, started in New York some time ago with the avowed intention of making war on Taunman, has capitulated to the boss. It is evident the club membership was not composed of the Tilden quality of timber.

Facilities for Irrigation: No country on earth surpasses the United States in natural facilities for irrigation. The question of a certain supply of water for growing crops is sure to be a great issue of the future.

Dames of High Degree: The courts have decided that there are three different and distinct breeds of colonial dames and we presume that all of them are harmless as long as you don't question their ancestry.

Thanks, Awfully: Lord Pauncefote says of the Americans that so long as they are not dealt with in an underhanded way or treated as a lower class they are right nice people. This might be said of any other nation.

Education Follows the Gun: The army has cleared the way and now 100 American teachers will follow to the Philippines. The new generation of little brown people will hardly be able to recognize their own fathers after the teachers have done their perfect work.

Happy Land of Mikado: One of Japan's influential citizens, who has been traveling in this country says that strikes in the United States are the mark of the Mikado in the flourishing and progressive republic of pure strikes are oppressively extensive and numerous in this hot month of July. It is not possible that the Mikado would be so kind as to send his emissaries to the United States to see what lessons in the sweet reasonableness which exists here.

"Fighting Bob" Makes a Point: This is a curious and interesting bit of history which Rear Admiral Evans' "Fighting Bob" contributed to the war-time Scribner-Sampson affair. According to the dead letter office in all the principal postoffices of the country. We doubt very much whether the suggestion will meet with favorable consideration. There is no saving to be effected by the scheme, but on the contrary it would involve greater outlay than is now incurred by the government. While it might enable the postmaster general to do away with a small part of the force employed in the dead letter office it would involve the employment of additional clerks in every important postoffice that would be designated as a branch office and could not possibly be offset by the saving on pound rates paid by the government for the transportation of dead letters.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

Who Killed Free Silver: It is interesting to notice that many who during the last few years have apparently been as eager for free silver coinage as a Jeweling for a wall to batter his head against, now discover that they never really thought anything of free silver, but merely supported the idea for the sake of the fact that currency and his ships were not there, and it was only when the Buffalo under Captain McCulla, came along with a copy of the code that it was learned that further waiting would be useless. So much for the historical perspective. If it be absolutely true that the demand of our courts of inquiry should not be altogether in our favor.

BLASTS FROM HAN'S HORN.

Emulation is a cure for envy. Every conversion is a miracle. Simplicity is the sign of seriousness. Friends are not good kept in view. The giving hand is the only cure for the grasping heart.

The danger of ambition's paths lies not in that they are steep, but that they are slippery. The man who is keenest on the inspection of his neighbors is usually weak in introspection. We are almost inclined to agree with those who deny the soul if they speak for themselves alone.

There is one habit worse than walking with your hands in your pockets, that is, keeping your heart there. There is one habit worse than walking with your hands in your pockets, that is, keeping your heart there.

SACRIFICY OF AN OATH.

Reasons for the Widespread Indifference Complain Of. Louisville Courier-Journal. It is held by some that perjury grows in frequency because our laws are made by lawyers and for lawyers. Now the truth is our laws are not always made by lawyers. More's the pity. The laws which by their obscurity, give the lawyers the most employment are probably those drafted by laymen or by members of the profession who can be called lawyers only by courtesy. The bills drafted by really able lawyers are often in the interest of their clients rather than for their personal advantage. Enlightened business men who desire legislation for their own advantage will see the best legislation in the preparation of their bills. Honest lawyers in our legislatures do a great deal to eliminate the credulity and obscurities of the bills drafted by unskilled hands.

It is true, however, that a good deal of modern legislation has multiplied the number of oaths necessary to be taken by legislators. The old system of pleading was technical and artificial in a perplexing degree and its simplification was a public service. But the requirement that every oath should be sworn to by the profession was a technical and artificial in a perplexing degree and its simplification was a public service. But the requirement that every oath should be sworn to by the profession was a technical and artificial in a perplexing degree and its simplification was a public service.

Old Sol and General Humdinger could not do a better job if they had had a controlling interest in a soda water fountain. Reports of frequent "assaults" on the temple seem to indicate that the national game is doing business regardless of the mercury.

Although the doctors disagree on minor points in cases of insanity, they are agreed on the main essential. "Send for a physician." An important court at Buffalo, N. Y., spoiled the city council's snap by ordering that body to award paving contracts to the lowest bidder.

If there is any substance to the claim that swindlers will cause him to spend his life in jail, it is as good a time as any to test it to a finish. The middle-aged fakir in Denver answers to the name of Francis Truth. He does not permit the elements of truth to influence his business.

President Diaz of Mexico is to be the guest of the French nation during his visit to France and from Paris, France, the Marquis will have an escort of a few of French war vessels. This description of Marie Corbell is from an admirer who visited her recently. "Her abundant hair is of a golden shade and she has a most charming smile upon her face. She has a clear complexion, regular features and her eyes are a deep blue and full of soul. Her figure is petite and perfectly proportioned."

The Illinois commissioner of the Land Office has added to the war trophies of the Army in Chicago a pair of enormous war boots by General Phil Sheridan during his famous ride to the battlefields of Cedar Creek from Winchester, twenty miles away. The stirrups are in a good state of preservation.

A woman worth while is that to be respected. J. A. Philmore, who has resigned the position of manager of the Pacific coast of the Southern Pacific railway after almost a lifetime of meritorious service. He will be paid $1,000 a month till the end of the year and a pension of $500 a month thereafter as long as he lives.

Michael Tamm, the distinguished trial lawyer, is about to make a tour of the United States in the interest of the United Trust League, successor of the famous Land League of the "Big Six" line of the American people. Mrs. Edward Pease of Denver, Colo., who started last October on a trip throughout the south, east and north to obtain money for the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptive Sufferers, returned yesterday with $100,000 in cash, the equivalent of the $100,000 she had spent for the hospital.

Mrs. Edward Pease of Denver, Colo., who started last October on a trip throughout the south, east and north to obtain money for the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptive Sufferers, returned yesterday with $100,000 in cash, the equivalent of the $100,000 she had spent for the hospital.

Mrs. Edward Pease of Denver, Colo., who started last October on a trip throughout the south, east and north to obtain money for the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptive Sufferers, returned yesterday with $100,000 in cash, the equivalent of the $100,000 she had spent for the hospital.

Mrs. Edward Pease of Denver, Colo., who started last October on a trip throughout the south, east and north to obtain money for the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptive Sufferers, returned yesterday with $100,000 in cash, the equivalent of the $100,000 she had spent for the hospital.

Mrs. Edward Pease of Denver, Colo., who started last October on a trip throughout the south, east and north to obtain money for the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptive Sufferers, returned yesterday with $100,000 in cash, the equivalent of the $100,000 she had spent for the hospital.

Mrs. Edward Pease of Denver, Colo., who started last October on a trip throughout the south, east and north to obtain money for the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptive Sufferers, returned yesterday with $100,000 in cash, the equivalent of the $100,000 she had spent for the hospital.

Mrs. Edward Pease of Denver, Colo., who started last October on a trip throughout the south, east and north to obtain money for the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptive Sufferers, returned yesterday with $