Pellos Court Decides that He Did Not Use Formaldebyde in Milk.

Tending to Show that Formaldehyde Comes Direct from the Cows.

D. K. Young, proprietor of the Golden on a charge of putting formaldehyde in his milk, and has been acquitted. The case, which was tried Friday afternoon before Judge Gordon, presented several interesting elements, and one or two positive surprises. It seems the defense was loaded. It came into court with a coup up its sleeve, as it were, and from all the evidence adduced it was clear that one of these three propositions must be true: First-That Mr. Young's cows give for-

The chemist explained the modus operandi of making the tests and offered in evidence test tubes containing samples of the milk that had been subjected to treatment in his laboratory. He used three processes, he said, known as the Leonard-Smith, the Rimini and the Liebermann tests. The first was always sufficient to detect the presence of formaldehyde; it turned the milk a red color, which gradually became a purplish blue. If there was no formaldehyde in the milk the color of the milk remained unchanged

The first witness on the stand was Milk Inspector Hutton, who told how he secured and marked the samples. Chemist Dummer followed, testifying to having found the preservative in the samples submitted to him. These were the only witnesses put on by the prosecution. Then the defense followed with the entire Young family save one son. It comprised the father, mother, a daughter 22 years old and two sons, all of whom take part in the dairy work. All denied that formaldehyde or any other form of preservative had been used by them in at least three years. About six years ago they had used a sample bottle of some kind of fluid that was supposed to preserve the sweetness of milk, but it hadn't proved satisfactory and they had never used it again. The prosecution admitted that the testimony of the third son would be in substance the same as that of the other members of the family, so he

What is Ovaritis?

A dull, throbbing pain, accompanied by a sense of tenderness and heat low down in the side, with an occasional shooting pain, indicates inflaranation. On examination it will be found that the region of pain shows some swelling. This is the first stage of ovaritis, inflammation of the ovary. If the roof of your house leaks, my sister, you have it fixed at once; why not pay the same respect to your own body? You need not, you ought not to let yourself go, when one of your own sex holds out the helping hand to you, and will advise you without money and without price. Mrs. Pinkham's laboratory is at Lynn, Mass. Write a letter there telling all your symptoms and get the benefit of the greatest experience in treating female ills.

"I was suffering to such an extent from ovarian trouble that my physician thought an operation would be necessary. "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound having been recommended to me, I decided to try it. After using several bottles I found that I was cured. My entire system was toned up, and I suffered no more with my
