Queer Doings of "Twelve Good Men and

True" When Lecked Up. HOW SOME VERDICTS ARE REACHED

Turning a Trick with Cards or Dice -Sample Instances Gleaned from Court Records in Various States.

(Copyright, 1901, by W. A. Willis.) The deliberations of juries after the door of the juryroom has been closed are not always of that calm and dignified character accredited to them by popular opinion. Only on the rarest occasions does anything of what goes on in the juryroom become a matter of actual public knowledge, for the average juryman is as mum as an oyster about the cases which he has been called upon to decide, but there are occasional leakages from the juryroom calculated to shake the faith of the most conservative, in the institution of the "twelve good men and true." On this order was a recent damage suit in Indianapolis, where the jury was called upon to decide whether the plaintiff was entitled to damages for injuries alleged to be due to the negligence of the city, a telephone company and an asphalt corporation. Apparently the jury was of average caliber. Like many other juries of all calibers, they couldn't agree. After they had been out forty-eight hours the status of opinion was strenuous than moral sussion. seven to five in favor of the plaintiff. Some eight hours later one of the seven changed his mind and the jury stood evenly divided at six to six. There was every prospect of an indefinitely prolonged deadck, when one of the pro-plaintiff jurors bad a brilliant idea.

"We'll never do any business this way." he said. "Let's get a pack of cards and play for it, the losers to accept the decision of the winners."

As a sporting proposition this met with instant favor. As a scheme for adjusting differences it was hailed joyously. Seven-up was agreed upon as the form of arbitration. The jurors sent out for cards and divided up into three sets of two pairs each, the he didn't reach that decision till he lost side which should win two out of three fo' of his front teeth." matches to be declared victor. of the jury had played pinochle against the other .ix for their votes. One-half the jury stood for murder in the first degree, while the other six favored a verdict of murder in the second degree, which would have meant imprisonment for life instead of hanging. The first degree crowd won the freeze-out and the man who was being tried by this body was hanged. That was a clever scheme which a Brook lyn jury evolved last spring to avoid the use of their deliberating further, as they would never be able to reach a common ground. The court told them to go back and the taste of the jurors. One of their number evolved a plan. They notified the court that they would hand in a sealed verdict. The "verdict" was duly handed in and the velope was opened and to the indignation of statement that no agreement could be reached. worked it had unpleasant consequences, for the judge hauled the jurymen up and after severely lecturing them inflicted a considerable fine upon each and every man.

A Kentucky Method.

In Kentucky they have a method of settling differences of opinion which is occasionally employed in the juryroom. A man named Kerr was on trial for felonous assault and after the jury had been out for three hours sounds were heard from the juryroom indicative of something more after the jury filed in and the foreman, with a wild eye gleaming from under a purplish cushion of swollen flesh, essayed to render the verdict. "Zhury f-f-f-fize defen't issutt," he sputtered. "The court fails to understand the ver-

The offer When the day of the trial came every fight- much more expense to the county for a was taken up and the story runs that the ing man on either side was crowded in the new trial of the action. After a while some man won five jurors, one after the other, for courtroom, but the sheriff had exacted a one who had something to do with the acquittal, lost three of them back; then, solemn pledge from every man that he drawing of men for the juries saw to it that after a great deal of see-sawing, landed the would not draw a gun or a knife as long there was no more mixing. Despite this entire eleven. The result was an acquittal, as he was in the place and the sheriff knew precaution, however, old Dan Sullivan, where the actual sentiment of the jury was that they would keep their word. Believeleven for decision of guilt and one for a ing that it would be less trouble to acquit pen to him, managed to get drawn on a decision of innocence. A somewhat similar the prisoner than to convict him the clerk jury to try a suit for $5,000 brought against transaction in the juryroom is told by a of the court so arranged matters that there the county by a farmer. The other eleven put in and the jury retired. It all hinged on slightest pretense of discontent over his a question of veracity.

They Fit and Fit. No sooner had the key to the juryroom remark about the Poes for taking an assault case into court. The words were landed him on his back with a blow on the point of the jaw. It was the signal unpleasant consequences of an inability to for a general mixup and before the first agree. After being out for eight hours they ballot on the solemn question involved had reported to the court that there was no been taken the twelve "good and true men" were enjoying a battle royal that sports would have paid thousands of dollars to see. The friends of the prisoner deliberate some more. A night in the had the advantage in numbers, but the juryroom was in prospect. This wasn't to Poes made this up by the suddenness with which they went into action. They had planned the whole thing out beforehand and the eight were taken completely by surprise. If four Poes could lick eight jurymen sent home. When court convened of the other side in a fair, square fight, it on the following morning the sealed en- would give the family a prestige throughout the county that would do much to make the judge the "verdict" was found to be a people forget that one of them had taken a private grudge into the courts. And so on guard at the door of the juryroom heard the fighting and the accompanying oaths, and he called for help. Three other threw open the door of the juryroom. The four Poes were all on their feet and fighting hard. Three of the other side had fallen and the walls and floor of the room were spattered with their blood. The court officers, who tried to pacify the jury, were banged around unmercifully and their calls for help brought all the Poes and all the friends of the prisoner within hearing to the juryroom on a run. their allies followed that continued for a to the woods to escape the wrath of the court over their disregard of the sacred oath administered to them and didn't come out again until the court moved along on the circuit. The prisoner was bailed and "Issutt; zhury fize'm issutt," insisted the the case was allowed to die a natural death. The courtroom had to be completely refurnished, for there wasn't a whole table, chair or desk left in it.

One Bents Eleven. How old Dan Sullivan got a verdict, alone and unaided, against seven hostile jurors, is legal local history in the city of For many years there had been a conflict in that region between the farmers and the city folks and this feeling never got so bitter as when either side was engaged in any litigation. You couldn't get a country jury to decide in favor of a man, no matter what the evidence might be, and it was just as certain that the plaintiff in an action who happened to come from the country would lose if the jury was who was always having queer things hap-

door been turned in the lock than one of early in the afternoon. The eleven the prisoner's relatives made an insulting countrymen talked the matter over and decided among themselves to give a verdict for the plaintiff, placing damages at $3,000 hardly out of his mouth before a Poe They didn't think it was worth while to consult Dan, but merely notified him of the decision they had come to and said they would go through the formality of a ballot Dan calmly wrote out a decision for the county on his blank and when the result was made known the eleven countrymen were very much surprised. They gave Dan a line of stock arguments and warned him that they would keep him out all night if he didn't yield. They took another ballot but the result was the same. Old Dan puffed away at his cigar and smiled. He smiled his way through a dozen more ballots and an array of threats that might have haunted a less obstinate man. At 6 known to the court, who ordered the jury to stay out until it reached a verdict. Then the court went home and the jurors set about laboring with Dan. They told him Beautifully as the plan had the fight went on. The sheriff's officer that he was an old man and that the strain of a night in a juryroom might result in making him a sufferer for the rest of his life. Each and every one of officers came to his assistance and he then the eleven countrymen declared dramatically that he would never recede from the position he had taken and in other ways it was made clear to Dan that he would have to yield. After an hour or so of this kind of talk another ballot was taken. This time Dan took another position. He found for the plaintiff and fixed damages at 6 cents. The enraged eleven informed Dan that they A general mixup of the two families and for it and the eleven disposed themselves week. The members of the jury retired before very long old age would tell and wouldn't take another ballot until he asked comfortably around the room, satisfied that Dan would give in. At midnight the eleven began to get a little less determined. The began to get a little less determined. Two laid down on a bench, but they were too nervous to sleep in such quarters, so they sat up and swore at Dan. "Whenever ye come around to my way of thinkin' jest let me know," remarked Dan as the clock struck 2. At 3 o'clock all eleven were lying down and trying to sleep, but Dan even scorned his chair. At 4 o'clock two or three began to weaken and a few minutes after 5 o'clock eleven hollow-eyed countrymen, very much subdued, came over to where Dan was standing and agreed if he would find again for the plaintiff they would fix the damages at 6 cents. Dan smilingly accepted the proposition and the vote was taken. As the foreman announced the result the sun poked its head over the sky line and Dan, with a prodigious yawn, sank down on a bench and before the court officer could open the door to let the jury out was fast asleep and snoring huge, satisfactory enores. Afterward the defeated jurymen learned that for ten years their fellow juror had been a sufferer from insomnia, which rendered it utterly impossible for him to close his eyes in sleep from the time that the sun went idents of West Omaha precinct for a dividown in the evening until it came up again in the morning. earnings increased $181,330, or more than 12 per cent.

Financial papers are making various estimates on what earnings of the company will be available for dividends for the fiscal year ending with June. Last year the Union Pacific showed a surplus of $12,587 .-588 over all charges. This was equal to 4 per cent upon the preferred and 8.2 per cent upon the common stock. The increase of $1,136,127 in net earnings shown in the report for the fiscal year closing with June is equal to 1.09 per cent upon the $104.036 .. 000 of common stock. Granting that there is no increase in fixed charges, Union Pacific would show over 10 per cent earned upon its stock.

Prisoner is Held Until the Regular Police Arrive on Scene-Defendant in Juil and Declines to Make a Statement.

There was a lively time on Walnut Hill and Clifton Hill yesterday when a number of merchants of those suburbs took into custody George Goodrich, accused of passing forged checks at several stores in that vicinity. Yesterday morning Goodrich called at the on the Omaha National bank signed by E. B. Barrett, made in favor of Dr. E. H. Powers. He received in change about its purpose the protection of members of $15, and, taking the goods, went to the store of Peter Wilson at 4125 Military avenue, where he purchased feed to the identical with the one passed upon La-Bounta. Getting the change here, he went to the store of L. Vankowski, 4120 Mlitary avenue, where he purchased goods will be a state convention of retail grocers amounting to $6. Here he tendered a third check of exact likeness to those he had already passed, but Vankowski refused to take the paper and restored the goods to the shelves.
