SOMETHING FOR LOVERS OF NATURE

Another Novel by a New American Writer that Will Appeal to All Lovers of Good Fiction—Abbey Press Books.

It has been said that persons who love nature are more apt to live long and happy lives. In this country, until quite recently, few people have realized this fact...

Current Magazines.

Cassell's Magazine for August continues "Kin," Rudyard Kipling's serial; it has a very fine illustrated article, "The Alpine Guards," describes and pictures "John Hampden's House," has a graphic portrait sketch, "Divisions," tells of "Astronomical Management," with many portraits and poses and gives an illustrated sketch, "Pulling Down London." There is a most interesting study, as they are the most easily observed of living creatures. They are to be found everywhere, in the fields and woods, in the dooryards and even in the household. Subjects for observation are never lacking and although some prejudices exist against them, as in large part nuisances and pests from a human standpoint, yet their structure is wonderful and their life histories most interesting. As an aid to the study of insects Lealand O. Howard, chief of the Division of Entomology in the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, has published "The Insect Book," which is a popular account of the bees, wasps, ants, grasshoppers, flies and other North American insects, exclusive of the butterflies, moths and beetles. It is a most voluminous work, containing over 400 pages, with 250 illustrations. It contains full life histories of the insects mentioned, the principal aim of the book being to encourage the study of a rather neglected aspect of nature. The author truly remarks that the group of insects which it considers is of such great extent and the wealth of material so exhaustive that it has been a matter of difficulty to keep the book within reasonable bounds. In glancing through this volume it would seem as if the author had left nothing to be desired. He has not only accumulated a vast amount of most interesting information, but has so arranged it as to be readily comprehended by the non-scientific reader. In publishing this work the author has not only made a valuable contribution to science, but has brought great credit to himself and to the government department at Washington with which he is connected. Doubleday Page & Co., New York.

Messrs. Harper & Brothers have secured for their American Contemporary Novels series a first book by a new writer of unusual and striking importance. "The Manager of the B. & A.," by Vaughan Kester, is a remarkable performance for a first work of fiction by a young writer. It is also refreshing to learn that this novel is more concerned with the romance of business than with the pale sentimentalism that takes the place of genuine passion in so much of the fiction of today. Mr. Kester contributed a short story called "The Mills of the Little Tin Gods" to the Cosmopolitan about three years ago, which attracted marked attention at the time and evoked comment from more than one eminent critic. There was an indication in that story that Mr. Kester "sensed" so to speak, the feeling and atmosphere of business life as few have done it and there was the promise that if he developed this particular sensibility he would achieve something in a field which today presents, in our country, at least, one of the most fruitful for the young novelist. "The Manager of the B. & A." is a further evidence of Mr. Kester's power in the right direction. "Wood This Recollections," by Charles Louis Olds, is an amusing story told in a quaint and original manner. The volume is handsomely illustrated. Among other books from the Abbey Press is a volume of verse entitled "Birds Unaged," by Burton Langley Collins, a young writer of no little talent for a first book. It contains a number of birds and bird songs, of the beauty, grandeur and freshness of nature. Among the week's publications are four juveniles, neatly and entertainingly illustrated so as to attract the eye of very small people. "The Biography of a Cat" is told in simple language, with the idea of explaining the sympathy of children on behalf of dumb animals and is by Harriet Elliott. "How Tommy Was Cured of Crying," by Mrs. Gertrude Mitchell Walte, combines wit and humor and will afford an abundant amount of fun for the little ones. "Cupid in Grandma's Garden," by Mrs. David O. Paige, is a handsome little volume of bright and amusing verse. "Cat Tales in Verse," by Elliott Walker, will be appreciated by all lovers of cats. The verses are unique in their way. The Abbey Press, New York.

A large package of new books has come to hand this week from the Abbey Press, which is turning out a very great number of works of fiction. Among the number published this week might be mentioned "Green Valley," by T. B. Huntington, which is the story of a man unjustly accused of a crime and of a woman who conquers by love. "New England Poem," by Mrs. C. Richmond Duxbury, is a realistic story, both humorous and pathetic, with a plot that is well conceived. The volume is dedicated to the late Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher. "Wood This Recollections," by Charles Louis Olds, is an amusing story told in a quaint and original manner. The volume is handsomely illustrated. RAILROAD CHANGES HANDS

Reported Purchase of Omaha & St. Louis by the Wabash.

IF TRUE IT MEANS MANY IMPROVEMENTS

New Roadbed and Numerous Other Repairs Will Be Made Between Omaha and Pattonsburg—Better Service to St. Louis.

The report that the Wabash railway had at last purchased the Omaha & St. Louis line was a prominent theme for discussion along railroad row yesterday. It is true that this deal has finally been accomplished. It means much to the Wabash line also to Omaha.

Current Magazines.

Cassell's Magazine for August continues "Kin," Rudyard Kipling's serial; it has a very fine illustrated article, "The Alpine Guards," describes and pictures "John Hampden's House," has a graphic portrait sketch, "Divisions," tells of "Astronomical Management," with many portraits and poses and gives an illustrated sketch, "Pulling Down London." There is a most interesting study, as they are the most easily observed of living creatures. They are to be found everywhere, in the fields and woods, in the dooryards and even in the household. Subjects for observation are never lacking and although some prejudices exist against them, as in large part nuisances and pests from a human standpoint, yet their structure is wonderful and their life histories most interesting. As an aid to the study of insects Lealand O. Howard, chief of the Division of Entomology in the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, has published "The Insect Book," which is a popular account of the bees, wasps, ants, grasshoppers, flies and other North American insects, exclusive of the butterflies, moths and beetles. It is a most voluminous work, containing over 400 pages, with 250 illustrations. It contains full life histories of the insects mentioned, the principal aim of the book being to encourage the study of a rather neglected aspect of nature. The author truly remarks that the group of insects which it considers is of such great extent and the wealth of material so exhaustive that it has been a matter of difficulty to keep the book within reasonable bounds. In glancing through this volume it would seem as if the author had left nothing to be desired. He has not only accumulated a vast amount of most interesting information, but has so arranged it as to be readily comprehended by the non-scientific reader. In publishing this work the author has not only made a valuable contribution to science, but has brought great credit to himself and to the government department at Washington with which he is connected. EDICT ISSUED AGAINST DRINKING.

An edict from General Manager Dickinson of the Union Pacific road yesterday notified several thousand employees of that system that either habitual drinking or the mere frequenting of saloons on their part would result in their being considered sufficient cause for their dismissal. The first copy of the bulletin was posted on the board at Union Pacific headquarters and evoked a storm of comment all the morning. A swarm of employees in the building hovered about the reading of the edict.

COVERING THE INDIAN COUNTRY.

Rock Island Route Makes Extensions in Oklahoma. In a few months more the Rock Island road will have completed and begun the operation of some important extensions and branch lines in the heart of what has become the new territory—Oklahoma. Some of the new departures will be finished within a month, others not until November or December.

New Giant Steamers

The prediction made nearly two years ago by prominent engineers, says Harper's Weekly, that the coming ocean steamers plying between New York and Europe would reach 1,000 feet in length will have some new facts this season to justify it. The Oceanic, which eclipsed the famous Great Eastern in size and length, must take second place in respect to length to the largest steamer in the world, for the Celtic, which has just made its maiden trip to New York, takes precedence. Although a few feet shorter than the Oceanic the big new White Star liner has a much larger beam carrying capacity, which places it easily at the head of the world's steamers in respect to size.

STOLEN PLUNDER RECOVERED

Detectives Drummy and Mitchell Make a Search of the Hinkle Residence.

LAWYER BROME'S SILVERWARE IS FOUND

Mrs. Hinkle is Hurried Away from Festival Honored to City Jail to Join Her Accused Husband—Full Contention is Made.

Apparently a meek, honest janitor by day, a bold and resourceful burglar by night. This is the epitomized Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde character of the Hinkle case, the colored man who was arrested Monday as a suspect, so say the police.

REPORTED EXTENSION OF SCOPE

Chicago Dispatches Hint at Auditor Young's Promotion. Chicago dispatches received in Omaha yesterday morning announced that rumors have been circulated in railway circles to the effect that General Auditor Erastus Young of the Union Pacific has been made general auditor of the Union Pacific system. The dispatches also stated that Horace I. Bettis has been made assistant general auditor of the combined companies.

Methodist Jubilee at Huron.

HURON, S. D., Aug. 13.—(Special.)—Members of the Methodist church are arranging for a jubilee at Huron, S. D., on the occasion of the burning of the church property since its erection in 1883. The money to pay the debt has been raised and Dr. B. Clark, a former pastor, now a resident of Leadville, has been invited to deliver the jubilee address.

Keep Ranchmen Off Reservation.

LANDER, Wyo., Aug. 13.—(Special.)—Indian Agent Nickerson and a posse of Indian police from the Wind River agency are scouring the reservation for stockmen who use the reservation for grazing while white men are driving their flocks on the reservation and it is to investigate and put a stop to the practice that the Indian agent is making the tour.

No Clue Yet to Murderer.

CODY, Wyo., Aug. 13.—(Special.)—The coroner's jury in the George Corson murder case has failed to discover any clue to the identity of the murderer. Corson was a well-to-do ranchman and was found murdered in his cabin one day last June. The county authorities are still working on the case, but there is little hope of catching the murderer.

The Craze for Leviathans of the Deep.

The craze is to rush across the Atlantic as fast as steam and powerful engines can carry you; but with the advent of the future giant steamers a reaction may come, which will make the sea boat most desirable because of its superior quarters and accommodations.

At the Kursaal—

Table d'hôte dinners are served every evening from 6 to 8 o'clock, so that visitors to Manhattan Beach need not go home, but may go direct from their places of business to the pavilion and there enjoy their evening meal—Parties spending the afternoon and evening at the beach find the dinner a charming feature of the day's outing, as the bill is first-class and the service is perfect—Caterer Balduff is making these dinners a special feature to those who go to Manhattan Beach—and the result so far has been very gratifying.
