The American fleet, in conjunction with the army in the Philippines, has hampered the inflow of arms and munitions to the islands. A new system of recruiting the navy was adopted, recruiting officers going to different parts of the country instead of waiting until the men presented themselves at recruiting ships. The system is said to have been an undoubted success.

Much time is devoted to gunnery training and, the report says, the department is about to undertake a long-cherished project and establish two gunnery training ships on the Asiatic station. The department is about to follow up the precedent observed last year in the establishment of a torpedo reserve station at Norfolk by establishing four other stations at Port Royal, Charleston, Pensacola and a second one at Norfelk.
