WELCOME FOR THE WABASH LATENSER IS GETTING READY

Executive Committee of Commercial Club Discusses Newly Acquired System.

Railroad Men Are Requested to Visit Omaha and Become Interested in the Town-Mill Supply House Wants to Come.

The entrance of the Wabash railroad system into Omaha was the principal subject discussed by the executive committee of the Commercial club at the meeting yesterday. This road is the only one entering the city which has its eastern terminus east of Chi cago and this fact causes its appearance in the local railroad field to have considerable Importance in the eyes of local jobbers.

There is a struggle over the entrance of this road into Pittsburg, which it is understood will be the eastern terminus of the Wabash if the plans of George Gould are communication with the iron fields of Pennsylvania over one system and will reduce the time of shipments from that territory.

The opening of the short line to St. Louis with the equipment of Wabash lines was received with pleasure by the members of the club and it was decided to call particular attention of the officers of the road to the city of Omaha and to interest them in propositions looking to the elevation of the service in all lines of traffic between this city and other points on the system. For this purpose a committee consisting of J. B. White, E. E. Bruce, W. S. Wright, C. H. Pickens and E. M. Andreesen was appointed to invite the general officers to visit Omaha and to take up questions referring to the

Has Its Eye on Omaha.

A letter was received from a firm in the east which deals in mill supplies asking what inducements Omaha would offer to secure such a jobbing house. Omaha has 600 tributary mills and no mill supply house. The matter was referred to the secretary. A letter from a cultivator manufacturing company desiring to establish a factory in Omaha was referred to Euclid

The secretary appounced, in reference to the proposed trip of members of the club Friend, Neb., on the occasion of the national coursing meet, that a rate of one fare for the round trip had been secured from the railroad, providing twenty persons would attend. The matter was passed over informally, the secretary being instructed to communicate these facts to the

The National Credit Men's association asked the opinion of the club on the subject of the national bankruptcy law, and the matter was referred to a committee consisting of E. M. Andreesen, A. C. Smith and F. E. Sanborn.

The committee charged with the work of preparing plans for the reorganization of the internal affairs of the club asked for further time and the matter was postponed

The secretary reported that he had sent out circulars asking for information from club members as to the effect of the change in insurance rates upon their bustness, but that so far but three persons had responded. The insurance matter was passed over informally.

Auditorium Architect Says Contract for Building May Be Let by November 13.

John Latenser, architect for the audi torium company, says that he will have INVITATION TO THE GENERAL OFFICERS his plans ready so that on or before November 18 he will be ready to have contracts let for all of the construction below the first floor of the main building. His original plans are still in the possession of the consulting architect, but this is said to be an unimportant matter and the work below the main floor will be the same although amendments may be made in the

TROUSERS SEIZED FOR TAX

City Treasurer Hennings Takes Advantage of a Slumbering Delinquent.

LEAVES HIM TO SHIVER IN HIS PAJAMAS

Collector Turns Deaf Ear to Cry of Distracted Wife: "What Will My Husband Wear?" and Hurries

Back to City Hall.

When William Elliott of 2741 South Eleventh street got up yesterday and began to dress he found that his blue serge trousers were missing. The trousers are in City Treasurer A. H. Hennings' office and will be sold to satisfy $1.77 worth of personal taxes which Elliott refused to pay. Monday Elliott called at the city treasarer's office and paid taxes on some Omaha realty. His attention was called to the personal tax which was assessed against him. The man swore that he would not pay the tax and told the treasurer that he might whistle for the money.

A horse and wagon and sewing machine were listed among the personal property upon which Elliott was assessed. Collectors for the treasurer made an early morn ing call at the home of the delinquent taxpayer and were greeted by Mrs. Elliott. There was but little furniture in the sitting room. Mrs. Elliott declared that the sewing machine belonged to her niece. She maintained that they had sold their horse a few days ago and were about to turn it over to the purchaser. The wagon was the property of her cousin. Grandma owned the clock and Cousin Charles was the owner of the heating stove.

Tired of hearing the family history, Fred Anderson, collector for the treasurer, seized pair of blue trousers which were hung over the back of a rocking chair and left the house with "But what will my husband wear when he gets up?" ringing in his ears. Mr. Elliott hasn't called at the treasurer's office yet to claim his trousers. "I guess it's a little too cold to walk out in pajamas," one of the collectors who assisted in making the levy suggested. "He'll make his appearance as soon as some of the neighbors lend him a pair of trousers. He will certainly come, for the trousers are worth more than the amount of the tax." "The man will never show up in this office," Mr. Hennings remarked laughingly. "He is afraid that we'll get his coat and vest before we get done with him."
