"Hold on there," exclaimed Captain Lemly before the witness could reply. "I object." Captain Lemly stated that the precept did not call for the position of ships except to show whether they endangered Brooklyn. Replying, Mr. Rayner said that the objection was similar to other questions which had been admitted, but that he withdrew the question for the present.

In reply to questions by the court Mr Halligan said that when Viscaya turned toward Brooklyn "the Spanish ship bore on our starboard beam, a little forward and was headed toward us, distant from 2,000 to 3,000 yards." He also said that there were three or four guns heard at Clenfuegos and that these shots were regtilar.

Ensign Tells of Schley's Promise.

When Mr. Halligan retired he was succeeded by Ensign U. S. Grey, who was a naval cadet on Brooklyn during the Spanish war. He said he had heard no guns at Cienfuegos, but had seen the signal lights ashore.

Mr. Rayner asked the witness if he had any conversation with Commodore Schley during the night before the engagement of May 31. He replied that he had a conversation.

"I was on the signal bridge of Brooklyr after dinner," he said. "when the commodore came upon the bridge, and during the course of the conversation he stated to me: "Tomorrow we are going in with the ships not coaling to bombard at long range to develop the exact location of batteries and to form an estimate of their strength.' one of his ships during this bombardmen his force would then be rendered inferior to the Spanish forces inside the harbor that he was going in merely for a recon naissance and not to destroy the batteries or Colon."

The witness said he had been on the gut deck during the battle of July 3. Brooklyn pursued a slauous course, he said, at the beginning of the engagement and then swung rapidly to starboard with port helm His least range was 1,200 yards and his greatest 2,500 yards.

Three Cheers for Commodore.

The next witness was James A. Hand also an ensign, who had served on Brooklyn as a naval cadet. He testified that on the day of the battle of July 3 he was at the central station and received from Commo dore Schley and Cantain Cook encouraging messages to the men and that one of thesfrom the commodore was received with a "three cheers for the commodore."

Ensign Ralph N. Marble, who was a cadet on Brooklyn during the war, said that on the day of the battle off Santiago he had had charge of some of the after five-inch guns. His closest range was 1,100 yards. The orderlies had passed the range of 900 yards to him, but he had not used that range.

Dr. Paul Fitzsimmons, chief surgeon of the flying squadron, was the last witness of the day. He observed the battle of July 8 from the gundeck of Brooklyn and said that it seemed to him at the time that Brooklyn was fighting the battle entirely alone. He thought Brooklyn kept Colon from getting away. He was excused and event of the application being granted it is the court adjourned.

It was also de cided to hold a special conference of the church, which has been called for the second Sunday in November, the 10th, for the purpose of ratifying today's action of the church authorities as far as that is necessary. O. G. Snow has been appointed by Judge Hall special administrator of the estate of his father, the late President Lorenzo Snow of the Mormon church, with bond fixed at $20,000. President Snow left no will and the property owned by him, according to the peti tion, is valued at $10,000 to $12,000. In the petition appear the names of thirty heirs, numbering two wives, twelve sons, thirteen daughters and three grandchildren, but in the list the name of Leroi . Snow, the favorite son of the late church president, does not appear, neither does his mother. Minnie Jensen Snow, the youngest wife, with whom the decedent was living at the time of his death. Judge Bowman, attorney for the special administrator, said the omission was unintentional and was probably due to a mistake madby the typewriter in copying the list. The omission, he said, would not in any way affect the rights of these two heirs.
