FUSION WANTS MORE SHOW

Objects to Being Shut Out of Privileges by Democracy.

SUPREME COURT ASKED TO GIVE RULING

Officials of Nebraska Take Precautions Against Outbreak of Smallpox—Surgeon General Giffen Outlines Campaign Against Epidemic.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, Oct. 21.—(Special.)—An effort is being made by persons connected with the fusion state central committee to get from the supreme court a ruling on the sections of the election law which relate to the arrangement of the official ballot.

The new law provides a method for casting a straight party ticket, but the schedule contained therein makes no allowance for independent fusion tickets in the various counties, the names democratic and people's independent being grouped together back of a bracket. A cross in front of this bracket would mean that the vote would be counted for the state ticket of the democrats and populists, but in counties where both parties have nominees the vote for the latter would be neglected.

On account of this complication in the schedule the supreme court will be asked to issue an order against the clerk of Law, asking him to place the party names on the ballot without the bracket joining the democratic and populist names. The suit will be of a friendly nature and will meet with no opposition from the republicans. Mr. Lindsay, chairman of the republican committee, said that there could be no dispute from either side.

The judges of the supreme court will meet Wednesday to consider the case. The populists are taking the lead in the proceedings, but will likely have the co-operation of the democrats.

The court will also be asked to decide whether the democratic or populist party shall be given preference in position. The law requires the clerk to place the names according to the vote cast at the last general election. As the democrats and populists fused last year there is no way of telling which party polled the highest vote.

Chief Justice Norval today issued a temporary order restraining the county clerk of Lancaster county from certifying the form of ballot in this county and a hearing will be had some time this week.

Holidays in Public Schools.

Superintendent Fowler has ruled that holidays in public schools are dependent on the action of the local boards. He says: "So far as schools are concerned, the statutes of Nebraska do not provide legal holidays. A teacher, in the absence of any provision upon the matter in his contract, would have no authority to close school upon the so-called holidays without being legally required to make up the time so lost to the district. However, a district board has authority to make provision for closing the school upon such days and in case the board directs that school be closed on any specific day the teacher would legally draw pay for such time."

Douglas county is the only place in the state where the free high school attendance law carried. Many people do not understand that the law is optional. Mr. Fowler says:

"The free high school attendance law did not carry free in our county in the state of Douglas. In all other counties nonresident pupils will be required to pay whatever tuition the Board of Education may see fit to charge."

Alert Against Smallpox.

State officials are beginning to grow concerned at the outbreak of smallpox. Cases have been discovered in Lincoln and others are known to exist in various places in the state. In the Indian reservations in the northern part of Nebraska several cases have been found and reported to the state authorities.

Governor Savage and the members of the State Board of Health have considered the matter in all its phases and are taking every possible step to prevent spread of the disease. The officials believe the Indian cases should be dealt with by the national authorities. The secretaries of the State Board of Health have cautioned all physicians to observe carefully all quarantine regulations and to report promptly all cases found by them.

Surgeon General Giffen's Suggestions.

Surgeon General R. E. Giffen of the Nebraska National guard, formerly head of the Sternberg hospital at Chickamauga, has prepared the following statement for The Bee, detailing measures that should be taken by the public generally to prevent contagion, and those that should be taken after the disease has appeared:

"You ask me if there are any prophylactic measures against smallpox. There is none of so great importance as vaccination. It is a well known fact that where vaccination is carefully and systematically carried out at the time of the birth of the child and again at the age of puberty, re-vaccination in other words, epidemic of smallpox, rarely, if ever, occur, and the death rate is very low. It is very important that a community that every member should be vaccinated. Gratuitous vaccination should be provided for the poor, also for those who through carelessness or indifference would otherwise remain unprotected.

Unvaccinated persons should be looked upon as a menace to the health of the community. Vaccination should be made obligatory on every citizen. No unvaccinated children should be permitted to attend public or private schools, should be admitted into any institution for the care of children unless vaccinated. No unvaccinated persons should be sent to the army, or militia of the state. No emigrant should be permitted to land in this country until vaccination had been properly performed. If this rule were carried out effectively within the next fifty years medical history would record that smallpox was a disease of the nineteenth century, unknown at the present time. But ignorance and prejudice will always be to be fought before the civilized nations will fully realize how this great disease could be stamped from the earth solely by vaccination.

Where anyone is taken with smallpox the remaining members of the family should be vaccinated at once. The patient should be isolated in a public building or hospital and every city should be provided with a building for that purpose. But if Douglas is in hospital available and the patient has to be treated at home, such patient should be kept separate from the rest of the family. Those who act as nurses should be allowed to enter the infected apartments. The room should be well lighted and well ventilated and if possible should have an open fireplace. All the furniture except that necessary for the comfort and convenience of the patient should be removed from the room. The attendants should be vaccinated in contact with any member of the family or anyone else; should take every precaution in regard to cleanliness, such as disinfecting linens, beds, etc. A sheet worn out of a strong solution of carbolic acid or labarques solution, suspended across the doorway, will oftentimes prevent the contagion from spreading to other parts of the building.

The effects of the contagion is such to kill it and it is no doubt for this very same reason that we all remember in our young days when we had to wear the auilet of arseno-ferric sulphur and camphor during epidemics of smallpox, measles and diphtheria. And no doubt one of the things that should be done is to have the patient receive a resolution favoring the extensive use of perfumes upon the person who has the disease. This once killed the contagion of infectious diseases.

As the infection of contagion enters to all articles that have been in contact with patient, such as are worthless should be burned. Disinfectants should be steeped in a disinfectant solution such as a solution of chloride of zinc and four ounces of strong carbolic acid to a gallon of water; it should be boiled for half an hour.

The patient should be kept isolated until all the scabs have fallen off and the skin becomes quite smooth before appearing in public again. His whole body should be washed in a disinfecting solution, preferably alcohol, using a soft brush. He should take a bath in plain water with the use of castile or green soap. Now if he is provided with clean clothing, he need not hesitate to associate with him, even though his skin be red and his face deeply scarred. The body of a patient who has died from smallpox is still capable of transmitting the contagion. The body should be soaked with a most powerful disinfectant solution first with alcohol, then with chloride of lime. The soiled sheet in alcohol, wrap it around the body and taking six sources of chloride of zinc to a gallon of water, soak a blanket and the sheet around the body, then place the body in a hermetically sealed casket. It should be buried as quickly as possible after death. Of course cremation would be more preferable, but unfortunately seldom used.

Teacher Can Recover Pay.

In connection with the outbreak of smallpox the question has been raised as to whether a school teacher is entitled to compensation for the time a school is closed under quarantine regulations. Relative to this query Superintendent Fowler rules as follows:

If a teacher is employed for a definite time and during the period of his employment the district officers close the schools on account of the presence of smallpox in the city and keep them closed for several weeks the teacher is entitled to compensation ready to perform his contract, he is entitled to full wages during such period provided the school is closed in agreement in the contract exempting the district from its legal obligations in such cases. The act of the superintendent in closing the schools on account of smallpox is not sufficient. Although under such circumstances it is difficult and inconvenient to dismiss school, yet this affords no reason why the forfeiture of the district should be visited upon the teacher. The teacher is no supreme court decision on this question in Nebraska this opinion is based on a decision of the supreme court of Michigan. Northwestern Reporter, Vol. V, No. 5, p. 598.
